

LES PERSOHN D'ILLZACH (ALSACE) ET DE NICE

Prologue: Le nom de Persohn (ou Person) signifie fils de Pierre et est originaire de la Champagne. Ce nom est peu courant, mais on trouve une importante famille le portant en Algérie sans qu'on ait toutefois pu trouver un lien entre nos deux branches.

1. LANGRES & ILLZACH 1640-1872

Notre premier ancêtre connu François ou Franz Persohn arrive à Illzach en Alsace, près de Mulhouse, avec ses deux frères aux alentours de 1640, et déclare venir de Langres, dans la Haute Marne (dans l'Est de la France) probablement pour fuir les persécutions contre les Protestants qui sévissaient à l'époque de la guerre de Trente Ans. Maçon, il fait souche à Illzach où il est reconnu Bourgeois-Manant en 1643 par décision du Senat de Mulhouse. Son fils Thomas Persohn sera charpentier, puis on trouve dans sa descendance Hans Ulrich Persohn, maire d'Illzach ; Paulus Persohn un autre charpentier ; Jean Ulrich Persohn, cordonnier, et Jean-Jacques Persohn, imprimeur d'Indiennes (impression sur coton dont Mulhouse avait la spécialité), tous fixés à Illzach.

Après la guerre de 1870 la France doit céder à l'Allemagne une grande partie de l'Alsace ; les Alsaciens ont alors le choix de rester chez eux en acceptant la nationalité Allemande ou de s'exiler en optant pour la nationalité Française. Notre ancêtre Jean Persohn (1817-1877) opte pour rester Français et quitte donc l'Alsace avec sa famille vers 1876 : naissance d'Henri Persohn à Mulhouse en 1875 et décès de Jean Persohn à Nice en 1877) pour s'installer à Nice où existait à l'époque une forte communauté Protestante.

2. NICE 1862-1903

Son fils Jean-Leon Persohn (1842-1910) et son petit-fils (Jean Leon) Henri Persohn (1875-1946) seront négociants, importateurs de blé et farines. Cette branche de la famille s'éteindra dans la ligne male au décès de ce dernier en 1946. Jean Léon aîné épousera à Nice Berthe Riettmuller (1838-1928) elle aussi née à Mulhouse (1838-1928), et ils eurent 4 enfants : Lucie (voir les notes ci-dessous), Laure (décédée à 16 ans), Henri et Berthe.

Henri Persohn (1875-1946) avait épousé Ida Freytag (Tante Ida, 1876-1965). Ida était Suisse, son père un diplomate Suisse à Sébastopol en Crimée. Elle avait épousé en premières noces un gentleman Turc, Miran Abdukkah, puis s'était remarié avec Henri Persohn après son décès en 1920. Elle a habité à Nice jusqu'à la fin de sa vie, où je me rappelle l'avoir rencontrée, déjà très âgée en 1960. J'ai par ailleurs hérité d'un très bel ensemble de boutons de manchettes et de plastron en or qui appartenaient probablement à son père.

3. PARIS 1903-1961

Ma Grand-mère, Berthe Persohn (Mamy, 1879-1961) épousa à Nice en 1903 François Ferran, capitaine d'Etat Major, qui mourra au front en 1914, comme Lieutenant-Colonel commandant le 101ème Régiment d'Infanterie à Tracy-le-Mont dans l'Oise, au début de la 1^{ère} guerre mondiale.

Veuve avec deux jeunes enfants, elle s'établit à Paris. Nous l'avons bien connue car elle vécut longtemps avec nous, et s'éteindra en 1961 à l'âge de 82 ans à Poigny où elle repose à côté de son mari.

NOTES SUR LA FAMILLE PERSOHN

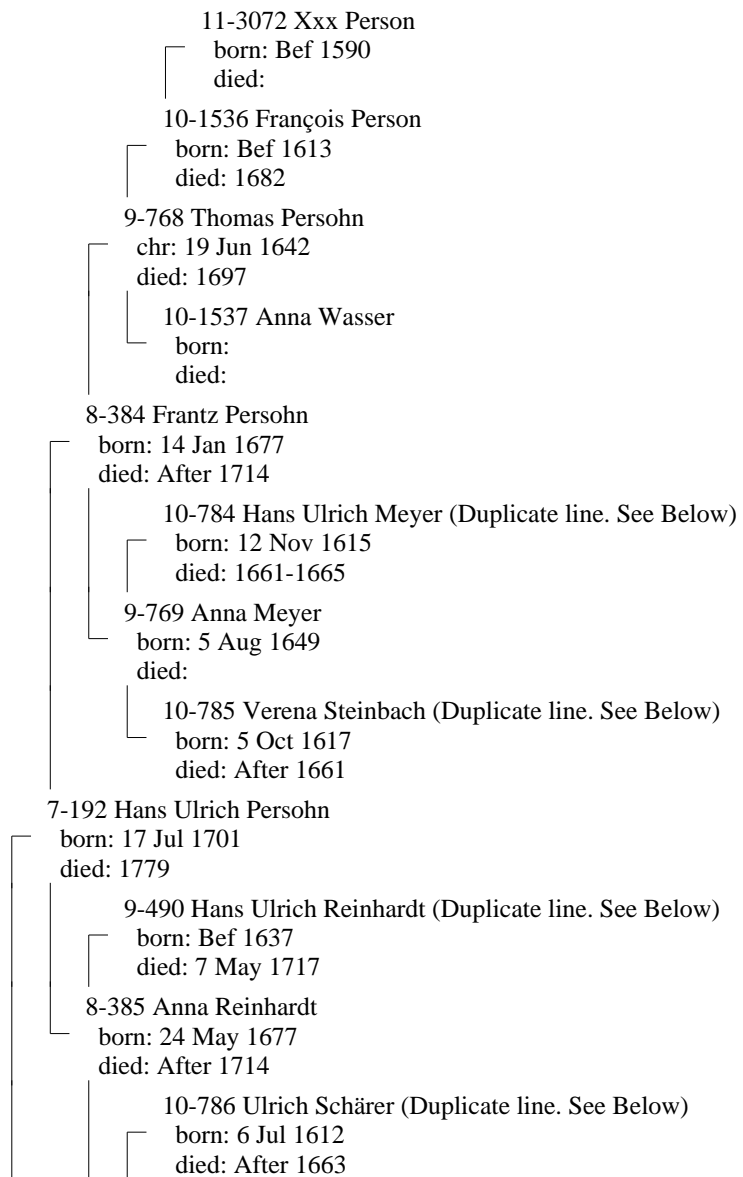

Lucie Persohn, (1872-1957) sœur ainée de ma Grand-mère Berthe épousa en premières noces Georges Doussot. Leur fils unique, Lucien, mourra pour la France en 1915 (161^{ème} Regt. d'Infanterie, tué à l'ennemi). Elle épousera en 2nde noces Georges Labourasse dit Georges Charlie, un ingénieur chimiste fils de Jean Oscar Labourasse dit Robert Charlie, brasseur et rédacteur en chef de plusieurs journaux. Les deux sœurs étaient brouillées, je n'ai donc jamais rencontré Lucie...

Lucien Doussot, mort pour la France (1895-1915)

On peut supposer que les frères Person, Huguenots, qui déclarent venir de Langres en 1643, ont fui cette ville pour échapper aux persécutions religieuses sous Louis XIII.

Wikipedia Langres: Pendant les guerres de religion, les Langrois, pour la plupart, suivent leur maire, Jean Roussat, qui reste fidèle au roi légitime (Henry IV). Le parti de la Ligue est très virulent dans la région, avec les Guise dont le bastion de Lorraine est proche. Les protestants et les reîtres allemands avec, entre autres, le prince Casimir s'y opposent, et les deux partis ravagent le pays alentour. Une bataille a lieu au pied des murailles de Langres, au faubourg de Brevoines, le 31 juillet 1589, sans résultat décisif. Dans la nuit du 19 au 20 juillet 1591, un pétard est placé sur la porte de la place du Marché pour investir la ville, mais l'alerte est donnée à temps.

LES MARTYRS DE LANGRES

Langres, ce chef-lieu d'arrondissement de la Haute-Marne, qui est aujourd'hui une petite ville toute catholique et le chef-lieu d'un diocèse, eut au seizième siècle son réveil évangélique, bientôt noyé dans le sang. dit l'Histoire des Martyrs,

La courte notice, à laquelle ces lignes sont empruntées, parut pour la première fois dans l'édition du Martyrologe de 1582, qui l'emprunta à l'Histoire ecclésiastique de Théodore de Bèze parue deux ans auparavant. Plus de trente-cinq ans s'étaient écoulés depuis le martyre de ces premiers réformés de Langres. Il n'est donc pas surprenant qu'il règne dans ce récit un certain vague et qu'il s'y soit glissé quelques inexactitudes, que lui reproche l'Anti-Martyrologe de Severt. C'est lui qui nous a le premier appris que le vrai nom de Séraphin était Robert Lelièvre, et que les premiers martyrs de Langres, immolés sur la place Maubert, à Paris, étaient au nombre de quatre au lieu de cinq. Les textes des arrêts, retrouvés et publiés par M. Weiss (2), confirment ces renseignements, qui n'avaient pas échappé à notre ami, M. D. Benoit, dans ses annotations du premier volume de Crespin.

Robert Lelièvre avait d'ailleurs pris soin lui-même, pour dépister les limiers du Parlement et du clergé, de faire l'obscurité sur sa personne et de voiler son identité sous des noms d'emprunt. Il se faisait appeler tantôt Séraphin d'Argences, tantôt Antoine Deschamps ; dans la contrée de Langres., on paraît l'avoir surtout connu sous le nom 'dé Séraphin. Des quatre arrêts du Parlement qui le concernent, les deux premiers ignorent encore son vrai nom qu'il s'était refusé à déclarer. La cour de Paris, devant laquelle, il fut renvoyé, en 1548, par le prévôt de Langres et le bailli de Sens, paraît avoir été assez intriguée, par ce mystérieux personnage. Soupçonnant que ce prédicateur de la Réforme pourrait être un ancien prêtre, ce qui eût aggravé son cas, elle rendit son Premier arrêt (3), en date du 28 juin 1548, ordonnant au sénéchal de Lyon, aidé du substitut du procureur général, de faire des recherches dans les registres de l'archevêché de Lyon pour s'assurer si, dans les dix dernières années, On devait subsidiairement tâcher de découvrir

La Cour menaçait qui ne ferait pas toute diligence pour l'aider dans ses recherches, de les y et de plus elle demandait que les renseignements ainsi recueillis lui fussent envoyés en double, par deux courriers successifs, L'absence dans les arrêts subséquents, de toute mention à la cléricature du prévenu, prouve que les recherches faites dans les archives de l'archevêché de Lyon n'aboutirent à aucun résultat, mais elle ne prouve pas du tout qu'il ne fût pas prêtre. En effet, le nom sur lequel porta cette enquête, et le seul que la Cour connût alors, était un pseudonyme. On chercha vainement dans les registres, Séraphin d'Argences ; peut-être y eût-on trouvé Robert Lelièvre. Ce qui nous fait croire qu'il était prêtre, c'est justement le soin qu'il mettait à cacher son identité à des juges qui avaient pourtant à leur disposition la chambre de torture pour faire parler les prévenus trop discrets.

Robert Lelièvre était originaire de Tours (4). Amené à l'Évangile dans des circonstances que nous ignorons, il évangélisa Bourges, Sens, Blois, Angers et autres lieux. C'est ce qu'on peut inférer du texte de sa sentence qui porte que

Il fut donc un évangéliste itinérant, allant de lieu en lieu, sous des noms divers pour prêcher le pur Évangile, et, comme Tite au siècle apostolique, à mesure que ses prédications y avaient groupé quelques croyants. Il eut pour auxiliaires dans son oeuvre missionnaire deux colporteurs, Adrien Canal et Étienne Mulart, qui comparurent, le 17

août 1547, devant la cour du Parlement de Paris, sous l'accusation d'être Leur procès, dont nous ignorons l'issue, était encore pendant une année plus tard (6).

Mais ce fut surtout à Langres que le ministère de Robert Lelièvre paraît avoir porté des fruits abondants. Il organisa dans la maison de Jean Taffignon et de sa femme Marguerite Séjournant, bons bourgeois de Langres, qui furent les Aquilas et Priscille de la jeune Église. Leur serviteur Nicolas embrassa la foi de ses maîtres et fut plus tard enveloppé dans les poursuites. L'Église recruta ses membres dans toutes les classes de la société. Nous y rencontrons une dame noble, la damoiselle Marie de la Bourdinière ; un religieux du couvent des dominicains de Langres, nommé Argillières ; un musicien, Jean Thuillier, dit Le Camus ; deux orfèvres, Guillaume Michau et Nicolas Testevuyde ; un potier d'étain Jacques Boyer ; un cordonnier, Simon Mareschal ; un fourbisseur, Jacques Bourelot ; un éperonnier, Jean Camus ; un barbier, Cosme Johanninet ; deux maçons, le fils de Guyot Coignet et Nicolas Sauvaige ; un chapelier, Jean Germain ; deux hommes dont la profession n'est pas indiquée, Guillaume Provenchères et Michel Mareschal.

Un fait intéressant à noter, c'est que l'Église de Langres, comptait dans son sein des familles entières. Neuf de ses membres ci-dessus nommés furent accompagnés en prison par leurs femmes, qui partageaient leur foi. Quatre autres noms de femmes (probablement de jeunes filles) figurent dans les arrêts du Parlement.

On a remarqué dans cette liste de noms celui d'Argillières, religieux dominicain. Un chroniqueur local, Javernault, le nommé Largilier, lui donne le titre de et le représente comme Il semble résulter de ce texte que Lelièvre, après avoir fondé l'Église de Langres, en confia la direction à l'un de ses convertis, l'ex-moine Argillières.

L'adhésion donnée à la foi évangélique par un aussi grand nombre d'habitants de Langres, et le succès qu'eurent dans la contrée les prédications de Robert Lelièvre, portèrent ombrage à l'évêque et aux autorités civiles. C'était d'ailleurs le moment où Henri II venait de créer la Chambre de la seconde Tournelle criminelle, dite Chambre ardente, dans le but de Les intentions du roi avaient été comprises, et, de toutes parts le clergé et les prévôts rivalisaient de zèle pour alimenter le redoutable tribunal. Le prévôt de Langres, inspiré sans doute par l'évêque Claude de Longwy, cardinal de Givry, résolut de frapper un grand coup. Il fit arrêter, probablement vers 1547, Robert Lelièvre et les trois principaux membres de l'Église, Jean Thuillier, Michel Mareschal et Jean Camus, et après avoir instruit leur procès, les renvoya devant le lieutenant criminel du bailliage de Sens, qui à son tour transmit les pièces du procès à la Chambre créée au Parlement de Paris pour juger les cas d'hérésie.

On aimerait à connaître les détails du procès de ces humbles chrétiens devant la Chambre ardente. Les détails n'en sont malheureusement pas parvenus jusqu'à nous. Nous savons seulement qu'ils ne faiblirent pas devant leurs juges et furent trouvés dignes d'être frappés du maximum de la peine, sans ces légères atténuations dont on faisait bénéficier ceux auxquels la crainte et les tortures arrachaient des demi-rétractations.

L'arrêt contre Robert Lelièvre, Jean Thuillier, Michel Mareschal et Jean Camus, les déclare convaincus En conséquence, ils sont condamnés : Un retentum ou article secret ajoutait que les prisonniers auraient la langue coupée, s'ils essayaient de rendre témoignage de leur foi.

L'exécution eut lieu, conformément à cet arrêt le 1er août 1548. Les condamnés souffrirent leur supplice dit le Martyrologe, Le prêtre, chargé de les exhorter, fut tellement frappé qu'il oublia sa mission de convertisseur et se borna à les encourager à supporter patiemment leurs maux. L'un des martyrs, Robert Lelièvre sans doute, lui dit :

Mais l'autodafé du 1er août 1548 sur la place Maubert, s'il avait décimé l'Église de Langres, n'eût pas suffi pour la détruire. Un second procès contre les fidèles de Langres était pendant devant la Chambre ardente, et un second autodafé devait s'allumer, à Langres même, un mois plus tard.

seconde série d'arrestations faites à Langres pour cause d'hérésie dut suivre de bien près la première. Les réformés avaient continué à se réunir plus ou moins secrètement dans la maison de Taffignon, pendant que s'instruisait le procès de Lelièvre et de ses compagnons. Un jour que l'ex-moine Argillières administrait la Cène aux membres de la petite église de Langres, le sieur Petit, lieutenant du prévôt, fit irruption dans la maison et arrêta tous ceux qui ne réussirent pas à fuir. Parmi ces derniers, étaient le ministre lui-même, la damoiselle de la Bourdinière et d'autres, en tout huit hommes et six femmes, qui furent assez heureux pour échapper. Les autres, cinq hommes et sept femmes, furent conduits en prison, et l'on instruisit leur procès.

La justice avait été longtemps à Langres dans les mains de l'évêque ; mais le roi avait rattaché cette ville à la prévôté de Sens, et le tribunal de l'évêque n'avait plus de juridiction que sur les habitants des localités dont il était le seigneur. Mais il est probable que l'évêque, surtout lorsque, comme alors, Il était prince de l'Église avait une influence considérable sur les affaires de justice lorsqu'elles touchaient à la religion. D'ailleurs, avec les ordres rigoureux donnés par le roi, les réformés de Langres n'avaient rien à gagner à être les justiciables d'un tribunal non ecclésiastique. Le procès criminel contre les accusés, comparants ou défailants, eut lieu devant le bailli de Sens et la peine de mort fut prononcée contre les plus compromis.

Les appels du tribunal de la prévôté de Sens étaient portés devant le Parlement de Paris, et les douze condamnés de Langres, ayant fait appel, furent transportés à Paris et écroués à la Conciergerie du Palais. Ce fut le 3 septembre 1542 que le tribunal qui, un mois auparavant, avait envoyé au bûcher Robert Lelièvre et ses trois amis, statua sur cette seconde série de protestants de Langres. Ils étaient accusés de de d' Sur les douze, huit méritèrent, par leur fermeté dans l'attachement à l'Évangile, d'être condamnés à mort. C'étaient Jean Taffignon et sa femme Marguerite Séjournant, Simon Mareschal et sa femme Jeanne Baillye, Jacques Royer, Jacques Bourrelot, Guillaume Michau et Catherine Cremer (2). Taffignon devait être brûlé vif sur la place du Marché aux porcs de Langres, et autour du bûcher devaient être dressées sept potences, à chacune desquelles serait pendu l'un desdits condamnés, dont les corps, après la strangulation, devaient être jetés dans le même bûcher où celui de Taffignon aurait été consumé.

Quant aux quatre femmes, que la chambre ardente ne jugea pas à propos d'envoyer à la mort, elles se nommaient Aimée Genevois, Anne Guillaume, Jeanne Coignet, femme de Jacques Bourrelot, et Claudine Baillet, femme de Jacques Royer. Elles devaient, le matin de l'exécution, assister à la messe, dans la grande église de Langres, à genoux, les pieds nus et un cierge à la main, puis à une prédication faite par elles devaient ensuite faire amende honorable devant la porte de l'église. Enfin, deux d'entre elles devaient être conduites au lieu de l'exécution et assister à genoux à l'autodafé. Quant à Claudine Baillet, dont le mari était l'un des martyrs, elle était dispensée de le voir mourir ; mais elle était condamnée à être Toutefois la Cour, prenant en considération son état spécial, ordonna que cette exécution fut différée

Ces quatre malheureuses, à qui l'on faisait grâce de la vie à des conditions si dures, regrettèrent sans doute la défaillance au prix de laquelle elles avaient la vie sauve, quand elles furent témoins de l'admirable constance des huit martyrs. Qu'on se représente cette scène digne de l'Inquisition d'Espagne, dont la ville de Langres fut témoin dans les derniers mois de 1548. Un bûcher se dresse au milieu du marché, et sept potences tout à l'entour, auxquelles bientôt se balancent les corps de quatre hommes et de trois femmes, coupables d'avoir embrassé la pure doctrine évangélique. Et bientôt la même flamme consume, dans un immense brasier, ces cadavres et le corps vivant de celui dont la maison a donné asile au culte réformé. Pour compléter le tableau, ajoutez-y deux traits : ces femmes à genoux, la corde au cou, sur un échafaud, et condamnées à être les témoins du martyre de leurs amis, qu'elles n'ont pas osé partager, et, tout à l'entour, une multitude fanatisée par la prédication qu'elle vient d'entendre dans la grande église.

raconte Crespin,

Un trait, rapporté par le Martyrologe, mérite d'être conservé. Jeanne Baillye femme de Simon Mareschal, exhorta ses compagnons à la fidélité et dit à son mari : Comme elle était la plus jeune, on la réserva pour être la dernière exécutée, les prêtres lui promirent si elle reniait sa foi ; mais l'héroïque jeune femme n'entendait pas renoncer au rendez-vous de son céleste fiancé, et elle demanda qu'on ne différât plus de la laisser mourir pour la cause de l'Évangile.

Conformément à l'arrêt de la Chambre ardente, la maison Taffignon, où s'étaient tenues les assemblées protestantes, fut et à sa place fut construite une chapelle en l'honneur du Saint-Sacrement. Cette chapelle a subsisté jusqu'en 1825. Le peuple, qui conserve longtemps le souvenir des faits, a donné ; à la rue dans laquelle était cette maison où Robert Lelièvre prêcha la Réforme, un nom qui eût dû sauver de l'oubli celui du courageux évangéliste. Il l'appela la rue au Lièvre, nom qu'elle porte encore aujourd'hui.

Le procès de sorcellerie d'Adelberg Meyer

La première mention des accusations de magicien et de maître sorcier contre Adelberg se trouve dans le compte-rendu du conseil du 15 septembre 1617, alors qu'Adelberg était toujours détenu à la tour de la prison au-dessus de la porte du Rhin. Dès la séance du conseil du 17 septembre, il est transféré à la tour de Spalen et on fit appel aux conseils des facultés de théologie et de droit concernant cette affaire.

Lors de l'inventaire de ses biens et la clôture de sa propriété dans le faubourg Saint-Jean, les fonctionnaires du tribunal mirent la main sur les objets compromettants, tel miroir, anneaux, une cassette en argent, livres de légendes hébraïques, livrets de magie et de formules magiques, et que ces objets furent ensuite mis en relation avec son comportement traître et perfide, ses jurons contre Dieu, et que de tous ces éléments, on construisit les accusations de magicien et de sorcier. Malheureusement, les dépositions au sujet de cette affaire n'ont pas été conservées. Le conseil prononça le jugement contre Adelberg très rapidement, dès le 22 décembre selon le compte-rendu, et cela avec une rigueur extrême. L'avis de la faculté de théologie et de droit au sujet de l'affaire d'Adelberg est conçu en ces termes : " Adelberg Meyer devra être révoqué de ses fonctions, reclus dans une habitation, ses biens confisqués, faire amende honorable et être entendu le lendemain. "

Il ne s'agissait pas seulement de l'accusation de sorcellerie, mais aussi du comportement d'Adelberg durant le procès de succession : blasphème, faux témoignage, faux et destruction de preuves.

La faculté de droit considérait toute l'affaire sous le même angle que les pasteurs et tenait pour avéré que même si l'on ne pouvait constater de grave péché de magie ni d'une alliance explicite avec le diable, il était malgré tout vrai qu'Adelberg avec eu recours aux conseils de sorcier pour ses affaires et donc qu'il tenait plus en estime ces pratiques superstitieuses et perverses plutôt que de placer sa confiance en Dieu. Même si l'on s'avisait que les dépositions ne puissent être retenues à sa charge, la découverte chez lui des anneaux magiques, la cassette en argent et des livres de cabale hébraïque étaient des preuves suffisantes pour l'accabler.

Pourtant, il aurait mérité la peine de mort du fait du blasphème multiple, faux à plusieurs reprises, actions méchantes, utilisations de faux sceaux, destruction de preuves, et toutefois, il pourrait suffire de le révoquer de toutes ses fonctions, de le bannir du pays, de lui confisquer ses biens et de lui infliger toutes les autres peines prévues, selon la coutume du pays.

Dans cette perspective, Adelberg fut astreint le jour suivant à faire amende honorable, qui devait être renouvelée de temps à autre.

Il promet ensuite de respecter tout ce qui est écrit et devra être interné dans une maison à définir, et dont il ne devra sortir ni de jour ni de nuit. Ce document est signé de lui de sa signature tremblante.

Adelberg fit encore parler de lui. Comme il n'y avait pas encore de maison prête pour purger sa peine d'internement, il fut de nouveau placé en détention au Spalenturm, les frais devant être pris en charge par ses fils et ses gendres.

La liquidation de l'héritage Mentelin occupa les tribunaux encore de nombreuses années. Le Conseil avait décidé en son temps, que les Eckenstein devaient recevoir gain de cause en premier lieu. Hieronymus Meyer se plaignit ensuite au nom de son père que ces derniers avaient saisi sa part d'héritage. Ce n'est que le lundi 20 mars 1620 que le prévôt du tribunal de la ville rendit son jugement dans le procès de la succession Mentelin : bien qu'Adelberg Meyer ait commis de graves manquements et des actions punissables, le Conseil s'en tient au jugement donné précédemment.

Les fils et gendres d'Adelberg annoncent au Conseil qu'ils accordent une pension annuelle de 200 florins à leur père et beau-père, et qu'ils achètent pour lui une maison. Le Conseil autorise cet achat, mais renouvelle une décision précédente disant que les huissiers de la Rheintor devront être payés et précise le montant de la rémunération hebdomadaire des domestiques d'Adelberg, valet et servante.

Un des derniers signes de vie d'Adelberg est une supplication pour sa libération, afin de pouvoir d'assister aux offices religieux. Le conseil, quelque peu sceptique concernant ses besoins religieux, refusa et lui imposa en revanche la visite du pasteur.

Fait partie du contingent envoyé à Pavie en Italie en 1512

"Notes Théo Weber : Hans WEBER réside à Illzach et fait partie du Contingent qui combattit à Pavie (Italie) en 1512. Lorsque Louis XII, Roi de France envahit l'Italie pour y revendiquer et maintenir ses droits, le Pape Jules II qui le combattit, fit appel à ses alliés (les Cantons Suisses). Ceux-ci se répartirent la contribution en hommes, et la Ville de Mulhouse, alliée de Bâle proposa ses services.

Un peloton de 20 hommes comprenant Hans WEBER fut envoyé avec le contingent Bâlois et poursuivit les troupes Françaises jusqu'à Pavie.

Martin BRUSTLEIN, qui commandait les Mulhousiens, voyant à un certain moment qu'il n'avait plus devant lui que des mercenaires allemands, monta le premier à l'assaut entraînant ses troupes et s'illustra en donnant le signal des combats. Il fut blessé au bras à cette occasion. En récompense, le Pape Jules II offrit aux Mulhousiens une bannière brodée marquée d'un Saint Etienne, Patron de la Ville, que le Musée Historique conserve actuellement. En 1513, six hommes de Mulhouse furent envoyés se joindre aux 200 hommes qui continuèrent la lutte jusqu'à Novarre.

Enfin en 1515, François 1er, n'ayant pas donné satisfaction aux suisses, ceux-ci reprirent la lutte et se retrouvèrent aux prises avec les troupes du Roi. Le contingent de Mulhouse se composait alors de 94 hommes commandés par - Le bourgmestre Laurent JORDAN, Capitaine - Le Conseiller Hans WEBER, Lieutenant - Valentin FRIES, Enseigne. Les deux premiers y laissent leurs vies, ainsi que 19 de leurs hommes, et l'enseigne ramena le reste de la troupe à Mulhouse, à la suite de quoi François 1er proclama la "Paix Perpétuelle", traité auquel fut associée notre ville en 1516. Mulhouse est alors une petite république.

Délégué auprès des Confédérés et dans les pays rhénans, M. fut l'un des principaux diplomates bâlois de l'époque de la Réforme. Sur le plan intérieur, il sut se rendre indispensable en prenant la tête du parti modéré lors des luttes confessionnelles des années 1520. Premier bourgmestre élu par le Conseil (et non pas instauré par l'évêque), il devint l'un des politiciens bâlois les plus puissants de son temps.

General Notes: Imprimeur

FROBEN a été l'un des exécuteurs testamentaires d'Erasmus qui était venu à Bâle travailler avec son père Johannes FROBEN, le célèbre imprimeur. Erasmus était installé chez Johannes FROBEN pour travailler avec lui. Un an avant la mort de Johannes FROBEN, Erasmus avait appelé PARACELSE pour soigner Johannes FROBEN malade. Quand il fût remis sur pieds, PARACELSE obtint en remerciements un poste de professeur à l'université de Bâle qu'il ne garda pas longtemps car ses méthodes étaient trop en avance sur leur temps. A la mort de Johannes FROBEN, Erasmus a rédigé son épitaphe et a écrit une très belle lettre qui décrit son ami Johannes FROBEN. HOLBEIN a fait les portraits d'Erasmus, de Johannes FROBEN. Avec la lettre et le portrait, nous avons la chance de pouvoir bien connaître Johannes FROBEN.

Tanneur, Tribu des Bouchers

Bourgeois 1552
Sexvir de la Tribu 1552

Persécuté pour sa religion protestante, c'est en 1542 que Klaus Schlumberger, l'ancêtre de la branche alsacienne de la famille Schlumberger, quitte son Wurtemberg natal. Il est le fils cadet d'une famille aussi honorable que fortunée de la région d'Ulm. Il décide de tenter sa chance en Alsace, dans le bourg de Guebwiller.

Nicolas se convertit au protestantisme et est rapidement en opposition ouverte avec le prince abbé de Murbach, qui contrôlait les états. Persona non grata à Guebwiller, Nicolas s'établit à Mulhouse en 1545, ou il devient tanneur. C'est le début d'une dynastie de tanneurs qui régnera à Mulhouse pendant près de deux siècles.

Il est reçu membre de la tribu des Bouchers (Mulhouse) en 1545, le jour de l'Exaltation de la Sainte Croix (20 septembre), et fut nommé sexvir de sa tribu le 22 décembre 1552

Il accède au rang de bourgeois privilégié le 28 août 1552

Il demeurait dans la rue dite Suttengasse, aujourd'hui la rue des Bons Enfants

"Nous, le bourgmestre et conseil de la ville d'Ulm, reconnaissons publiquement par cette lettre que Claus Schlumberger, le jeune de Setzingen, dont le corps nous appartenait en propre, s'est racheté légalement et honnêtement avec notre bon vouloir moyennant treize florins qu'il nous a payé comptant. C'est pourquoi nous renonçons aux droits sur le susnommé Claus Schlumberger, son corps et son bien pour nous et nos descendants. En ce qui nous concerne, nous ne pourrions plus avoir de droits, ni sur le corps, ni sur les biens du susnommé Claus Schlumberger, ni ne pourront exiger quoique ce soit de lui, ni de son vivant, ni après sa mort, ni le déranger d'aucune façon. Ainsi, à partir de maintenant, le susnommé Claus Schlumberger ne pourra plus jamais devenir bourgeois de notre ville ni d'aucune façon demander les droits accordés à la bourgeoisie d'Ulm. Comme le témoigne cette lettre, sur laquelle nous avons publiquement imposé le sceau de notre ville. > Tilmann SCHMOLLER - L'origine du patronyme provient du vieil allemand "schmollen" qui signifie rire ou sourire de manière narquoise. On peut donc penser que le premier porteur du nom était un personnage malicieux et rusé qui aimait bien se moquer des autres.

<http://www.cdhf.net/fr/index.php?t=bases&d=bases%2Fnotices&c=notices&f=selection&p=&order=nom1&order2=1&motcle=&nom1=schmoll>

- Les SCHMOLLER sont d'abord installés à Bâle, où ils sont fonctionnaires de la ville et de l'évêché, puis le temps d'une génération, dans la seconde moitié du XVe siècle, Constance, et enfin de nouveau à Bâle. Cette famille réduite ne peut pas développer de par son seul poids numérique un réseau important de parenté et d'alliances, en tous cas elle n'en a pas laissé de trace repérable dans les archives de ces villes. Pourtant, les SCHMOLLER doivent avoir bénéficié de soutiens pour obtenir des postes dans les administrations municipale et épiscopale de Bâle.

- Tillman SCHMOLLER qu'on trouve cité pour la première fois à Bâle en 1523 est dès le départ fonctionnaire de l'Evêché. A l'époque où les LICHTENFELS exercent une influence prépondérante sur le Chapitre de la cathédrale de Bâle, l'official Johann Steinhauser doit sa fonction à sa fréquentation des LICHTENFELS. Vers 1529, Tilmann SCHMOLLER, qui n'était qu'un simple scribe et n'a pas fait d'études universitaires, est nommé comme notaire épiscopal, promotion qui n'est à notre avis possible que s'il bénéficie de la confiance, tant de l'official Steinhauser que des LICHTENFELS.

Notes concernant l'union

- Les SCHMOLLER de Bâle, bourgeois de la ville dès avant 1437, habitent une maison au 32, Blumenrain où ils sont pratiquement voisins du Lichtenfelserhof, qui se trouve dans une rue perpendiculaire, la Spiegelgasse. La cour des LICHTENFELS y est contigüe à l'actuel n° 13, Blumenrain, qui occupe l'angle des deux rues. Une rue, un quartier, sont dans une ville à cette époque le creuset d'une communauté de voisinage. Beaucoup d'évènements se passent à l'intérieur du même quartier... Tilmann SCHMOLL se marie par exemple avec une voisine, Clara RIEHER, qui habite la même rue (Lotz).

General Notes: "le Réformateur" Prêtre puis Pasteur

Chapelier en 1523 à Mulhouse, devient adepte de la Réforme et du prêche.

Est arrêté par les Autrichiens et libéré par la force, par ses amis.

Mentionné pour la première fois dans une lettre du magistrat de Berne, datée du 25 décembre 1517, qui recommande Johannes Hofer, alors diacre et chantre à Berne, pour une prébende vacante. On ignore s'il fut donné suite à cette demande et où il résida entre 1517 et 1523. Il revint à Mulhouse et y fut chapelain à partir de 1523. Il devint ensuite un fervent adepte de la Réforme, et prêcha l'évangile non seulement à Mulhouse, mais encore dans les villages des environs. C'est pendant l'une de ces tournées, en 1525, qu'il fut capturé par les Autrichiens, probablement aux environs de Brunstatt. Plusieurs prêtres convertis avaient déjà été malmenés par eux et Johannes Hofer aurait subi le même sort sans l'intervention de ses amis de Mulhouse. Ceux-ci avaient été immédiatement prévenus de son arrestation et étaient allés se cacher dans les bois qui, à ce moment, bordaient la route qui va de Modenheim à Ensisheim. Ils se trouvaient donc sur le territoire de Mulhouse et savaient que les Autrichiens passeraient à cet endroit pour conduire Johannes Hofer, prisonnier, à Ensisheim. Les gens de Mulhouse avaient pris avec eux le chien de Johannes Hofer ; celui-ci donna de la voix à l'approche de son maître, et ce fut le signal de la lutte. Les Autrichiens furent mis en déroute et Johannes Hofer put être ramené sain et sauf à Mulhouse. La régence d'Ensisheim se plaignit amèrement de cet acte auprès de la Confédération suisse et exigea la remise du prêtre entre les mains des autorités impériales, ce qui ne fut pas fait.

Tous ces officiers communaux ainsi que les fonctionnaires subalternes, étaient nommés par le conseil de Mulhouse qui réservait à ses administrés les domaines agricoles de ces villages. Il paraît probable que Heinrich, fils du Bourgmestre Conrad, fut investi d'une fonction administrative à Illzach et que ce fut la raison de son établissement. Il y acheta des biens immobiliers en 1487. Il n'y a aucune autre précision sur sa vie et on ne lui connaît qu'un enfant.

Claus a épousé Barbara zum LUFT vers 1471 à Bâle. Claus était écuyer, très cultivé, ami des arts. Il était reçu à la tribu de la Clef en 1474 à Bâle. Il était prévôt en 1476 à Mulhouse. Il était membre du Grand Conseil à Bâle. Il était greffier du conseil en 1480 à Bâle. Il était bourgeois le 8 octobre 1482 à Bâle. Il était reçu à la tribu des Tisserands en 1488 à Bâle. C'est de lui que provient la tapisserie conservée au musée historique de Bâle. 705. Barbara zum LUFT est née avant 1471 à Bâle. Elle est décédée après 1534 à Bâle. Une tapisserie de style gothique tardif à scènes florales d'un jardin d'amour est aujourd'hui conservée au musée historique de Bâle. Au centre de cette tapisserie, on découvre les activités estivales de personnages en habits de cour dans un jardin somptueux. On reconnaît les fleurs à leur espèce : celles-ci ont un sens symbolique lié à l'amour et donc à la tristesse. La tente assure de l'ombre. Les armoiries des familles "zem LUFT" et "MEYER zum Pfeil" de Bâle flottent sur les banderoles et auvents.

MRitter Ritter Zu Rhein once again became a representative of that family, owner of the Haus zur Luft, which already appears in the first mention of the house. Frederick was the brother of the bishop of Basel, Kaspar Zu Rhein, and served in his service as tutor. In 1531 the property is described as "Hus and Gesess with stables and stables". That year, the house changed into new hands.

Johannes FROBENIUS

nguyenodile

KThe owners of the property were Hieronymus Froben (1501-1563) and his wife Anna Lachner. According to tradition, Jerome was born just in those hours of the year 1501, when Basel was admitted to the Confederation. He was thus the first Swiss citizen. His father was the Basel printer John Froben (ca 1460-1527), a good friend of Erasmus of Rotterdam (ca 1466-1536), who had his works printed with him.

HJerome, like his father, became a printer and continued his friendship with Erasmus of Rotterdam. He had the father's printing house moved from the house to the chair in the Totengässlein in his newly acquired house on the Bäumleingasse. Here he led together with stepfather Johannes Herwagen (ca 1497-1558) and brother-in-law Nicolaus Bischoff (1501-1564, Latinized Episcopius) his printing house, whose focus was the printing of the works of Erasmus.

Death House of Erasmus of Rotterdam

FIn May 1535 Erasmus, who had left Basel because of the Reformation, welcomed him to the property on Bäumleingasse. The mentally ill scholar had come to witness the pressure of his work Ecclesiastes. Actually Erasmus would have wanted to travel from Basel later by ship to the Netherlands, but the gout that plagued him got worse so quickly that it was impossible.

IO n the first floor at the end of the suite, Froben set up a room for Erasmus. The room had a fireplace heating, since the scholar oven heaters did not like. As the pain allowed, Erasmus worked tirelessly on. Although he was barely able to leave his bed since autumn 1535, he wrote an interpretation of the 14th Psalm entitled "On the Purity of the Christian Church".

Epitaphe par Erasmus

Cette pierre couvre les os desséchés de Jean Froben :
Sa renommée immortelle brille dans le monde entier.
Elle lui vient de sa vie pure comme neige et de ses efforts pour les lettres
Qui aujourd'hui gisent tristement privées de leur père.
Il a rendu et orné les monuments des anciens sages par sa science, son travail, ses soins, son argent, son amour, sa foi.
Justes divinités, donnez-lui dans le ciel une vie éternelle.
Sur terre grâce à nous sa renommée sera éternelle.

Du même pour le même en grec :

Ici repose Jean Froben imprimeur.
Personne n'a plus fait pour le bien des lettres.

Ne pleurez pas sa mort. Il vit, il respire et respirera toujours
Par son âme, sa renommée, et les livres qu'il a laissés.

Un des "trois Hans" (Amerbach, Froben, Petri), qui introduirent l'imprimerie à Bâle.

Érasme, Lettre à Jean de Heemstede, Bâle, 1527, sur la mort de l'imprimeur Frobenius : "J'ai supporté très raisonnablement la mort de mon propre frère et je ne puis endurer la perte de Froben. Mon chagrin est certes très justifié et ce n'est pas lui qui m'irrite; mais sa démesure et son excessive durée m'indignent. Enfin, de même que de son vivant mon amour pour lui n'avait pas qu'une seule raison, de la même façon le regret qui me fait souffrir de sa disparition n'a pas qu'une seule raison. Car la providence semblait nous avoir donné cet homme pour l'ornement et le progrès des études libérales; et je l'aimais pour cela davantage que pour son affection pour moi et la parfaite droiture de sa vie.

Qui pourrait donc ne pas aimer un pareil esprit ? avec un ami il était tout amitié, si simple et si sincère que même s'il avait voulu simuler ou dissimuler quelque chose, sa nature aurait pris le dessus pour l'en empêcher; si empressé et si avide de faire du bien à tous qu'il se réjouissait même si ses bienfaits profitaient à des gens qui n'en étaient pas dignes. Aussi était-il aimé et apprécié même des banqueroutiers et des voleurs. Si un voleur lui prend de l'argent, si un débiteur de mauvaise foi en retient indûment, il mentionne cette perte avec la bonne humeur que montrent les autres quand ils font un bénéfice inespéré. Sa probité était si parfaite qu'il mérite plus que personne qu'on lui applique le proverbe "on peut jouer à la mourre avec lui dans le noir" et, incapable de tromper personne, il était aussi incapable de faire porter un tel soupçon sur personne, quoiqu'il ait été assez souvent joué. Quelle maladie est la jalousie, c'est ce qu'il n'a jamais pu se représenter, comme les aveugles de naissance ne peuvent imaginer ce qu'est la couleur. Il donnait son pardon aux offenses quelle qu'en soit la gravité, avant même que l'offenseur ne l'ait demandé. Il était bien incapable de garder le souvenir d'une injure, et bien incapable d'oublier un service, même le plus banal.

Et pourtant, à mon avis, il avait trop de bonté pour un père de famille soucieux de ses intérêts. De temps en temps je le sermonnais pour l'engager à se comporter normalement avec ses véritables amis, mais à se contenter de gratifier les imposteurs de paroles, et à prendre garde à ne pas subir à la fois une perte et un ridicule. Il souriait gentiment, mais je chantais ma chanson à un sourd. Sa candeur battait tous les conseils. Et moi, quel piège ne me tendait-il pas ! comme il était à l'affût de l'occasion pour m'imposer quelque présent ! Et je ne l'ai jamais vu plus content que quand, par ruse ou par prières, il avait réussi à me faire accepter quelque chose. Il fallait la plus grande prudence pour éviter ses pièges. Et ma rhétorique ne m'a jamais tant servi que pour trouver un prétexte pour refuser ce qu'il me mettait dans les bras sans le fâcher. Car je ne pouvais supporter de le voir triste. Si par hasard j'avais envoyé mes serviteurs acheter du tissu pour un vêtement, il avait flairé la chose et avait déjà payé sans que je me doute de rien; et aucune prière n'aurait pu le contraindre à accepter un remboursement. Je devais le tromper de la même façon si je voulais qu'il ne perde pas son argent. Tel fut notre interminable débat, bien différent de ce qui se passe ordinairement quand l'un s'efforce de racler le plus possible, et l'autre de donner le moins possible. Je n'ai jamais pu obtenir qu'il ne donne rien du tout; en tout cas je suis bien persuadé que toute sa maison témoignera que j'ai usé de sa bonté avec la plus grande modération.

Tous les travaux que j'entreprenais, c'était pour l'amour des études. Et lui qui paraissait né pour les honorer, les rehausser, les faire progresser, lui qui ne marchandait ni sa peine ni ses veilles, s'estimant assez payé s'il mettait aux mains des hommes un bon auteur avec toute la dignité convenable, comment aurais-je pu me faire le parasite d'un homme animé de pareils sentiments ? Quand il était devant moi et ses autres amis les premières pages de quelque auteur important, comme il sautait de joie, quel air de bonheur, quel triomphe ! On aurait dit qu'il avait déjà été abondamment payé de toute sa peine, et qu'il n'attendait pas d'autre récompense. Je n'augmenterai pas ici la gloire de Froben en accablant autrui. On sait trop les fautes et la laideur des éditions que nous envoyèrent certains imprimeurs, même de Venise et de Rome. Au contraire, de sa maison et en peu d'années, quels volumes sont sortis et avec quel éclat ! Et il sut toujours éviter à son atelier la souillure des pamphlets (qui ne furent pas un maigre profit pour d'autres) ne voulant pas que la malveillance se mêlât aux lettres et aux études.

Il avait imprimé deux fois Jérôme. Il voulait rééditer Augustin avec un égal éclat, et plusieurs de ses amis, moi entre autres, essayaient de l'en détourner, mais il y avait voué si complètement toute son ardeur que dans sa société on répétait souvent : "Il ne désire prolonger sa vie qu'autant qu'il faudra pour achever Augustin." Il a vu les deux premiers tomes terminés. Son vœu était pieux, son intention digne de l'immortalité; mais l'éternelle providence en a décidé autrement : ses desseins sont impénétrables; il ne nous est pas permis de chercher à les comprendre et il nous est interdit de les blâmer.

Il était déjà assez âgé, mais sa santé était si solide, si vigoureuse que de toute sa vie il n'avait jamais été malade. Voilà six ans il tomba du haut d'un escalier sur un sol pavé de briques. C'était bien une chute à se tuer ! Il se remit pourtant, mais le mal avait, comme il est normal, laissé des traces dans son organisme, quelque effort qu'il fit pour le cacher. Il avait l'âme si noble qu'il répugnait à se plaindre. L'année qui précéda sa mort il fut saisi d'une effroyable douleur dans le talon droit. Et les médecins d'accourir avec leurs bons offices qui ne faisaient qu'exaspérer le mal, car ils n'étaient pas d'accord sur la maladie et essayaient tour à tour leurs remèdes; il s'en trouvait même pour prescrire l'amputation du pied. Enfin vint un médecin étranger qui stabilisa la douleur; elle était maintenant supportable et permettait à Froben de dormir et de manger. Finalement il se rétablit si bien qu'il alla deux fois à Francfort à cheval : le mal ne subsistait plus que dans les orteils du pied droit; il ne pouvait les plier, mais le reste allait bien. Je lui conseillai souvent - et son médecin aussi - de sortir moins fréquemment ou de ne pas sortir sans s'être assez habillé pour se protéger du froid : il ne nous écouta pas; il se serait cru déshonoré de changer la moindre chose à ses habitudes et de laisser voir qu'il était malade. Mais déjà la paralysie s'était aussi emparée de deux doigts de la main droite, prélude de la maladie proche. Il le cacha aussi, trouvant peu viril de rien céder à la maladie. Enfin un jour qu'il faisait je ne sais quoi en hauteur, saisi d'un malaise probablement, il tomba en avant sur le sol, se blessant gravement à la tête. On le porta sur son lit : il n'ouvrait pas les yeux, il semblait privé de sens et ne donnait aucun signe de vie : il agitait seulement la main gauche; car cette paralysie qu'il avait cachée, avait pétrifié tout le côté droit. Il resta ainsi pendant deux jours, dans le coma; à l'approche de la mort il sortit de son engourdissement, retrouva un peu et avec peine l'œil gauche, mais sans parler, et ne survécut pas plus de six heures.

Ainsi notre Froben, enlevé à la terre, a gagné une vie plus heureuse, laissant sa femme, ses enfants, ses amis, dans un amer chagrin, profondément regretté de ses concitoyens et de tous ceux qui le connaissaient. Pour sa mort, tous ceux qui cultivent les bonnes lettres auraient dû prendre le deuil, laisser libre cours à leurs larmes et à leur chagrin, orner son tombeau d'ache et de petites fleurs, y verser des libations, y brûler des parfums si ces offices étaient de quelque profit. Mais en tout cas, pour montrer notre reconnaissance, prions bien tous pour le défunt, donnons à sa mémoire les louanges qu'elle mérite, soutenons l'atelier de Froben : car il ne cessera pas son activité par suite du décès de son maître, mais au contraire il emploiera toutes ses forces à continuer en plus grand et en mieux ce que Froben avait commencé.

Epitaphe de Johannes Froben par Érasme de Rotterdam en hébreu, grec et latin (Bâle St. Pierre) :
 Cette pierre couvre les os desséchés de Jean Froben : Sa renommée immortelle brille dans le monde entier. Elle lui vient de sa vie pure comme neige et de ses efforts pour les lettres Qui aujourd'hui gisent tristement privées de leur père. Il a rendu et orné les monuments des anciens sages par sa science, son travail, ses soins, son argent, son amour, sa foi. Justes divinités, donnez-lui dans le ciel une vie éternelle. Sur terre grâce à nous sa renommée sera éternelle.

Du même pour le même en grec :

Ici repose Jean Froben imprimeur. Personne n'a plus fait pour le bien des lettres. Ne pleurez pas sa mort. Il vit, il respire et respirera toujours Par son âme, sa renommée, et les livres qu'il a laissés.

Cette ancienne famille - parfois orthographiée BIEGYSEN ou BIEGUISEN - a prospéré à Altkirch dès le XVI^e siècle. Elle doit son patronyme du verbe biegen (courber) et du nom Eisen (fer). On retrouve cette étymologie dans le nom BÜGEL (étrier) et BÜGELEISEN (fer à repasser), mais aussi dans l'ancien nom de métier BOGENMACHER, c'est-à-dire fabricant d'arcs.

"Conrad WEBER 1408-1468 : Tanneur, il vit à Mulhouse où il épouse en 1429 une fille Enderlin. Les Tanneurs qui exerçaient à Mulhouse, une profession importante, étaient établis le long de l'Ill pour subvenir aux besoins de leur métier.

La Rue des Tanneurs en est un souvenir et Conrad WEBER y avait sa maison. Au moment où les délégués des Tribus accédèrent à l'administra-tion de la ville, ils furent réunis à la Tribu des Bouchers, Corporation des plus importantes qui groupait les corps de métier (Tanneurs, celliers, corroyeurs), apparentés à ceux-ci par leur petite industrie ou artisanat.

Il est cité ensuite, en 1444, comme homme d'armes qui prit une part active à la défense de la Ville contre les Armagnacs lors de leur deuxième invasion (la 1ère ayant eu lieu en 1439). En 1453 il figure comme juge.

De 1468 à 1463 il fait partie, sans interruption, du Conseil qui administre la ville. En 1465 enfin il est Bourgmestre de la Ville de Mulhouse Tanneur à Mulhouse. Cité en 1451 et 1456 dans les Gerichtsprotokoll. En 1444, il est homme d'armes de la ville contre les Armagnacs. Juge en 1453. Conseiller en 1458. Bourgmestre en 1461.  Bourgmestre 1404 & 1440

[Sa filiation n'est pas assurée]

La famille BRUSTLEIN est une des plus anciennes familles de Mulhouse et qui comptait, sous la première forme de gouvernement, au nombre des VIII ou patriciens (Source : Burgerbüch, p.40-41).

Dès 1398, il est fait mention d'un Cunin BRUSTELLIN (126984?) comme membre du Conseil et, en 1404, comme bourgmestre. Il est cité aussi avec Hans et Clewin BRUSTELLIN dans le livre des tailles (Gewerfsbuch) de 1405. Dans le même registre, sous la date de 1418, est nommé un Lienhard BRUSTLIN. On trouve encore dans la liste des bourgmestres Cunin BRUSTELLIN en 1440 et Hans BRUSTELLIN en 1450. Ce dernier, qui était membre du Conseil, avait pris part en 1441 à l'expédition contre le château de Freundstein. En 1490, un Frantz BRUSTLEN fut reçu bachelier en philosophie à l'Université de Bâle, sur les registres de laquelle il avait été immatriculé trois ans auparavant. Le premier dont nos annales aient retenu le nom, est Cunin BRUSTELLIN qui, en 1398, faisait partie du conseil et qui devint plus tard, en 1404, bourgmestre de la cité. Il est mentionné dans le livre des tailles (Gewerfsbuch) de l'année 1405, avec Hans et Clewin (Nicolas) BRUSTELLIN. Ce même registre cite, en 1418, encore Lienhart (Léonard) BRUSTELLIN. Quant à Clewin, un document du Cartulaire de Mulhouse (t.I, p.463), l'appelle Clewin BRUSTELLIN von Richenszheim (Rixheim). Faut-il en inférer que les BRÜSTLEIN sont originaires de ce village, ou Clewin y demeurait-il accidentellement à cette date ? L'absence d'autres documents concernant les noms qui précèdent ne nous permettent pas de préciser leur degré de parenté ; il y a lieu de supposer qu'ils étaient tous les quatre frères ou pour le moins cousins.

Ehksam, dans son Bürgerbuch, dit que le bourgmestre Cunin BRUSTELLIN de 1440 est le même que celui de 1405. Quoique cela n'est pas impossible, le fait non seulement n'est pas prouvé, mais encore bien douteux. La première magistrature d'une ville n'a été confiée de tout temps qu'à des hommes mûrs, et par l'âge et par l'expérience, et il est alors peu probable que Cunin ait occupé, pour la première fois, les fonctions de bourgmestre avant d'avoir quarante à cinquante ans. Dans ces conditions, c'est sans doute un de ses fils ou un neveu, portant le même nom que lui, qui fut investi des mêmes fonctions trente-cinq ans après. Nous ferons du reste remarquer que nos trois chroniqueurs et le tableau des bourgmestres de l'hôtel de ville ne réunissent pas les deux dates sur un seul nom, comme c'est le cas pour d'autres bourgmestres ayant été en fonctions à deux dates différentes. En 1450, Hans BRUSTELLIN (63492), un autre fils de Cunin Ier, est à son tour bourgmestre de Mulhouse.

Un heureux hasard nous a cependant permis de fixer la filiation directe des BRÜSTLEIN dès la 3e génération, grâce à la première rédaction de la chronique de Pétri, encore inédite, dans laquelle le chroniqueur a rassemblé sommairement la généalogie d'une vingtaine de familles mulhousiennes, parmi lesquelles figurent les BRÜSTLEIN. Quoique ses données sur ceux-ci soient malheureusement trop sommaires, elles nous ont néanmoins suffi pour nous orienter sans erreur possible de 1506 à 1579, où notre besogne devenait alors relativement facile. Nous pouvons par conséquent garantir la filiation directe depuis Heiny(31746), n° 4. Il eut pour fils Hans(7942), n° 6, et pour petit-fils, Mathis, n° 11, suivant Pétri. Hans Heinrich, n° 12, fils de Mathis, eut quatre fils qui parurent devoir former autant de branches, mais deux d'entre elles seulement ont subsisté jusqu'à nos jours. En effet, le plus jeune fils, Hans, n'eut que des filles, et la descendance de Jacob s'éteignit à la troisième génération.

Handelsmann1. Als im Frühjahr 1403 die Basler im Kriege des römischen Königs Ruprecht gegen den Markgrafen Bernhard von Baden als Verbündete der Städte Colmar und Schlettstadt vor das dem Markgrafen gehörende Schloss Gemar im Ober-Elsass zogen und dasselbe am 6. April 1403 einnahmen, befand sich unter den Kriegerern aus Basel auch Conrad Iselin. Nach damaliger Sitte konnten sich in der Stadt ansässige Nichtbürger durch Teilnahme an einem Kriegszuge das Bürgerrecht erwerben, das ihnen bei der Heimkehr aus dem Feldzuge als Belohnung geschenkt wurde. Conrad benutzte die Gelegenheit, nahm am Zuge nach Gemar teil und wurde so der erste nachweisbare Basler Bürger des jüngern Iselinschen Geschlechts. In der Folge kam ihm auch ein Ratsbeschluss vom 26. April 1403 zugute, wonach alle diejenigen, welche das Bürgerrecht in einem Kriege verdient hatten, unentgeltlich in diejenige Zunft sollten aufgenommen werden, in welche ihr Beruf sie weise.

Im Jahre 1410 wurde er Kornschreiber oder Notarius im Kaufhaus und wohnte wie sein Vater im Hause zum . Er führte zuerst das Wappen mit den drei Rosen, das seine Nachkommen bis auf den heutigen Tag beibehalten haben.

General Notes: Arrivé à Bâle en 1364

Der Stammvater des heute noch in zwei Linien blühenden jüngern Basler Geschlechts Iselin, Heinrich Iselin (oder Isenli), kam nach Pfingsten des Jahres 1364 von Rosenfeld (Oberamt Sulz, Königreich Württemberg) nach Basel1 und starb daselbst am Otmarstag (16. Nov.) 1404. Ob schon er das Basler Bürgerrecht erworben hat, lässt sich nicht mit Sicherheit feststellen2. Der Umstand jedoch, dass die Ratsbücher sich nicht darüber aussprechen, führt zur Annahme, dass erst sein Sohn Basler Bürger wurde. Heinrich Iselin selbst stand in Diensten einer Frau .

Er war Eigentümer eines Hauses an der Freienstrasse3, das er nach seinem Herkunftsorte nannte.

Cette famille au destin exceptionnel, qui joua non seulement un rôle très important dans la capitale du Florival mais également à Mulhouse, a la chance de connaître parfaitement son histoire. Remontant à la charnière des XIV et XV^e siècles, elle est originaire de la région d'Ulm dans le Wurtemberg. Son nom serait issu d'un toponyme, Chlum, courant en Bohême. Faisant partie du patriciat mulhousien, et à l'instar d'autres grandes familles de la cité du Bollwerck, les SCHLUMBERGER ont bénéficié de travaux de nombreux érudits. Citons Nicolas EHRSAM et son "Bürgerbuch" de la ville de Mulhouse, publié en 1850, et donnant en annexe les planches d'armoiries des familles. Mentionnons également l'archiviste de Mulhouse Edouard BENNER dont le nom est attaché au volumineux travail d'inventaire des archives mulhousiennes. Mentionnons aussi le généalogiste Ernest MEININGER, imprimeur mulhousien et inventeur de la fameuse "méthode mulhousienne". Cette dernière, encore très en vogue et toujours performante, permet de représenter une généalogie par fiche familiale avec un système de numérotation continue. MEININGER est l'auteur de très nombreuses généalogies mulhousiennes. Il a composé, vers 1900, un premier volume de la généalogie SCHLUMBERGER, manuscrit que l'auteur de ces lignes a la chance de posséder. Entre 1903 et 1910 Léon SCHLUMBERGER publia le célèbre "Cartulaire de la famille Schlumberger", trois forts volumes représentant plus de mille cinq cents pages de transcriptions et de commentaires de textes. Les documents anciens analysés couvrent la période 1400 à 1798, date du rattachement de Mulhouse à la France. Léon SCHLUMBERGER avait aussi projeté de publier une généalogie complète de sa famille, mais la guerre vint interrompre ces travaux. Après la seconde guerre mondiale ses travaux furent repris, complétés, et publiés sous l'égide de Christine SCHLUMBERGER et Henry SPOERRY. Deux volumes de tableaux sont parus en 1953 et 1956, constituant dix-neuf générations d'une saga familiale exemplaire. Monsieur Jacques HENRY-GROS, descendant SCHLUMBERGER, a offert au CDHF de Guebwiller dès sont ouverture ces six précieux volumes permettant à tout un chacun de profiter de cette mâne généalogique et héraldique. Jean SCHLUMBERGER, né vers 1400, était hôtelier à Setzingen et bailli de l'ordre Teutonique. D'après la généalogie familiale, il serait l'ancêtre de tous les SCHLUMBERGER vivant actuellement tant en France qu'en Allemagne et en Autriche. Il eut quatre fils, Nicolas, Michel, Jean et Conrad. Nicolas vécut à Setzingen où il reprit les fonctions de son père. De ses trois fils, Jean continua de tenir l'auberge de Setzingen tout en étant bailli de l'ordre Teutonique. Son fils Nicolas assura la quatrième génération d'aubergiste à Setzingen. Les enfants de Nicolas se marièrent sur place où ils firent souche. Seul un fils, prénommé Nicolas, quitta Setzingen et vint s'établir à Guebwiller. Tanneur de métier il exerça son art dans la capital de la Principauté de Murbach dès 1542, avec son épouse Guebwilleroise Claire SCHLATTER. Il est l'auteur de la branche de Mulhouse dite branche aînée. De confession réformée il dut quitter Guebwiller et épousa à Mulhouse en 1555 la fille du pharmacien Jean ECK qui lui donna trois enfants. Provenant du fonds de feu l'antiquaire SCHELL, un censier du milieu du XVI^e siècle mentionne à plusieurs reprises "Claus Schlumperger". Nicolas devait un cens à l'hôpital de Guebwiller, cens constitué d'une somme d'argent de huit sols à verser annuellement le jour de la Saint Martin. En garantie de règlement il proposait un pré, attentant aux biens du couvent de la Porte aux Anges et à ceux de l'ordre Teutonique. Après son départ pour Mulhouse, cette rente sera payée par Thiébaud PFAFFENZELLER le tanneur, puis par Jean PFAFFENZELLER également tanneur. Enfin, en 1572, la rente fut rachetée par Jean Jacques KUPPLIN receveur de l'hôpital. Parmi ses trois enfants deux sont mort en bas-âge. Le troisième, Jean Ulrich, se maria par deux fois et eu quinze enfants de sa première épouse Rose BIEGEISEN. Fils de Jean 1er et frère de Nicolas, Jean résida à Oellingen près d'Ulm où il eut au moins trois fils. Le second, Christian, eu à son tour deux fils, l'un prénommé Jean qui assura une descendance sur place, et l'autre Mathieu qui vint à Mulhouse avant 1554. Mathieu eut au moins quatre fils de son épouse Apollinie MEYER. Le premier, Christian, sera l'auteur de la branche cadette de Mulhouse. Tout comme la branche aînée, elle s'alliera aux autres familles patriciennes de la ville tel les GROSHEINTZ, HEILMANN, FRIES, BETZ, BENNER, SCHOEN, HARTMANN, etc... Après avoir quitté Guebwiller au milieu du XVI^e siècle, la branche aînée des SCHLUMBERGER y revint avec un autre Nicolas vers 1810. Fils de Pierre et de Catherine HARTMANN Nicolas était né à Mulhouse en juin 1782 et y avait épousé, en juin 1808, Marie Elisabeth BOURCARD la fille d'un industriel de Wesserling. Nicolas acheta un moulin à Guebwiller, moulin dont la force motrice et l'accès l'eau étaient alors indispensables à l'industrie naissante. Il créa une filature de coton dont l'histoire sera désormais indissociable de celle de la ville de Guebwiller (N.SCHLUMBERGER et Cie - plaquette éditée en 1975). Disséminés à travers le monde et exerçant souvent des fonctions de haut niveau, les réunions SCHLUMBERGER on été instaurées en 1972 par Maurice SCHLUMBERGER. C'est ainsi qu'en 1984 plus de deux cents SCHLUMBERGER se sont retrouvés à Guebwiller où ils furent accueillis par un descendant de la famille, M. BEYDON directeur du domaine viticole. En 1993 se sont près de trois cents SCHLUMBERGER venant divers continents qui se sont retrouvés à Mulhouse et on ainsi plongé dans leur passé et fait connaissance avec leurs illustres aïeux. BENNER, famille patricienne de Mulhouse, dont l'origine remonte à des temps très reculés. Avant la forme plus démocratique de gouvernement qui fut établie en 1448, les BENNER faisaient partie des VIII de la bourgeoisie (AchtbürgerJ, qui, avec quatre représentants de la noblesse, composaient le Sénat.

Le livre des tailles (Gewerfsbuch) de l'année 1405 mentionne un PIERRE BENNER, qui alors déjà payait les impôts bourgeois; dans le plus ancien protocole judiciaire, de l'an 1425, paraît un CLAVIN BENNER, le vieux, et dans celui de 1440 un HENRI (Heini) BENNER. LEONARD BENNER (31744) assista en 1468 à la prise du château de Brunstatt, et il eut une part du butin, suivant un registre de répartition, qui a été conservé.

Thüring acquiert avec son beau-frère les seigneuries de Simmenegg dans le Simmental et de Mülinen dans le Kandertal, ainsi que la justice à Diemtigen. Il cédait sa part de la seigneurie de Brandis à son frère Wolfhard. Il était bailli à Trub (Berne).

Source: Geneanet ajehan

Les Brandis commencèrent par reprendre progressivement les possessions des seigneurs de Weissenburg: Thüring (1326-1368), époux de Katharina von Weissenburg, obtint d'abord en gage le fief de Simmenegg dans l'Obersimmental. Il entra en 1337 dans la combourgeoisie de la ville de Berne, alliance que la famille entretint jusqu'au XVIe s. Vers 1350, il acheta le bailliage de Diemtigen et, à l'aide d'emprunts, la seigneurie de Mülenen dans le Kandertal; il revendit une part à Berne en 1352 et légua le reste à son neveu Thüring (1350-1375). Son frère Heinrich (->), évêque de Constance, lui remit en gage, ainsi qu'à son autre frère Wolfhart (1341-1371) et à ses neveux, toutes les dîmes épiscopales du landgraviat de Bourgogne (1358), le château de Bischofszell (1366) et la seigneurie de Küssaberg près de Tiengen dans la Forêt-Noire (1377). De la même façon, un quatrième frère, Eberhard (->), abbé de Reichenau, fit passer dans la famille tous les biens et droits de son couvent. Soutenus par leur parenté, Heinrich et Eberhard guerroyèrent contre la ville de Constance. Comme ils l'avaient fait avec les Weissenburg, les B. reprirent une grande partie des biens et droits des comtes de Werdenberg-Sargans, en prenant prétexte du mariage de Wolfhart avec Agnès de Montfort-Feldkirch, veuve de Hartmann de Werdenberg-Sargans.

General Notes: Famille de petite noblesse, attestée en Argovie et en Suisse orientale, appelée aussi zem Tor, dont la généalogie reste incertaine; elle est peut-être issue de Wetzel, avoyer de Winterthour. Dès 1300, les Z. furent au service des Habsbourg. Johann, chambellan du duc Léopold d'Autriche, reçut en fief en 1314 le château fort de Teufen (ZH), dans lequel résidèrent certains de ses descendants jusqu'au milieu du XVe s., tandis que d'autres habitaient la région de Winterthour et peut-être le château fort de Freudenu (comm. Untersiggenthal, AG). En 1382, Cilia von Sal, veuve du chevalier Lütold Z., quitta Winterthour pour Frauenfeld, où une branche de la famille est attestée de la fin du XIIIe au milieu du XVe s. En 1390, son fils Kaspar (??1400) acheta le château fort de Blumenstein (près de Frauenfeld) et, par son mariage avec Cäcilia von Wellenberg, devint bailli de Müllheim. Au XVe s., le château fort de Freudenberg appartenait également à la branche de Frauenfeld. Kaspar (??1472), seigneur justicier de Hüttlingen (1439) et bourgeois de Frauenfeld (1443), vendit en 1467 le domaine de Blumenstein à la ville de Frauenfeld, entre autres biens, et en 1468 la juridiction de Hüttlingen à Hugo von Hohenlandenberg. Cité en 1455 dans le rôle fiscal de Frauenfeld, son fils Hans Heinrich posséda le domaine de Junkholz (près de Frauenfeld) jusqu'en 1462, puis la seigneurie de Teufen (ZH). A la mort de Kaspar en 1588, ses héritiers vendirent le château de Blumenstein et Junkholz à Ulrich Locher, secrétaire du bailli de Thurgovie. Les Z. de Frauenfeld s'éteignirent entre 1558 et 1560. Les biens de la branche zurichoise passèrent à la famille von Ulm par le mariage de sa dernière descendante en 1520. Le médecin bâlois Alban (->) descend peut-être des Z. de Teufen.

General Notes: Ministériel du duc Berthold V de Zaehringen, + av. 1289 (?? peut-être fils d'Heinrich vom STEIN, cité de 1201 à 1220, ministériel du duc Bertold de Zähringen)

Famille de chevaliers des XIIIe- XVIe s., dont le siège se trouvait probablement à Steinhof dans la seigneurie d'Aeschi (SO). Premier membre attesté, Heinrich de Lapide ("de Pierre", soit S.) détenait en 1201 un fief du duc Bertold V de Zähringen. Par la suite, les S. furent vassaux des comtes de Kibourg. Au XIVe s., quelques-uns devinrent bourgeois de Soleure, Thoune, Berthoud et Berne. Les S. disposaient de droits de justice et de biens étendus en Haute-Argovie, ainsi que dans la région de Berne et de Thoune, comme la basse justice à Utzigen (dès 1386) et les seigneuries de Blumenstein (dès 1439) et Strättligen (dès 1464). S'y ajoutèrent au XVe s. d'importantes possessions en ville de Berne. Celles-ci permirent aux S. d'accéder au cercle des familles dirigeantes de Berne. Les descendants de Hartmann (décès 1399), fondateur de la branche bernoise, portaient le titre de Junker et faisaient partie de la société noble zum Distelzwang.

Les S. continuèrent d'exercer leur pouvoir en occupant, dès la seconde moitié du XVe s., des charges dans les villes ou les bailliages communs, comme celles d'avoyer de Berne ou Thoune, bailli de Nidau ou Lenzbourg, et, dès la fin du XVe s., gouverneur d'Aigle, bailli d'Echallens ou Grandson. Sebastian fut le premier bailli de Locarno (1514). Les S. défendaient les intérêts de Berne auprès de la Savoie, de la France et de Milan, ainsi qu'à la Diète. Kaspar (décès vers 1507), Albrecht (-> 1) et Sebastian (décès 1551) furent délégués à plusieurs reprises. Lors des guerres menées par Berne et ses alliés, des membres de la branche bernoise furent à la tête de troupes, par exemple Georg (décès 1493) et Brandolf (décès 1500) dans les guerres de Bourgogne, celui-ci aussi dans la guerre de Souabe (1499). La famille s'éteignit avec Sebastian en 1585.

Pierre I (IV?), baron de la Tour-Châtillon, chevalier, entra l'an 1 291, dans la ligue des comtes & nobles du pays de Vaud contre les Bernois, & combattit contre ces derniers à la bataille de Tonner-Buhel. Il fit depuis la guerre en 1 294, à Boniface de Challant, évêque de Sion, & prit sur lui le château de Sewen. L'histoire rapporte qu'en cette guerre Pierre, baron de la Tour, & le baron de Rarogne, commandoient onze mille hommes : elle leur fut fatale ; mais le comte de Gruière les réconcilia avec cet évêque.

Amé II, comte de Genève, ayant fait son traité particulier avec le comte Amé V de Savoie, le 4 des ides de décembre 1293, 'il y est dît, que Pierre de la Tour, seigneur de Châtillon en Valais, serait chatelain du château de Genève à condition qu'Amé V pourroit s'en servir. Pierre de la Tour, seigneur de Châtillon, et Martin de Châtillon étoient du nombre des pleiges donnés par le comte de Savoie au comte de Genève en vertu de ce traité. Pierre de Châtillon est encore témoin en décembre 1 294 du traité entre Philippe de Savoie, prince d'Achaye & de la Morée, & son oncle Amé, comte de Savoie. Pierre de la Tour laissa de sa femme, héritière de la maison des barons de Frutingen : 1. Jean I qui suit. 2. Aymon de la Tour, évêque de Sion, dont il sera parlé à la suite de cette généalogie et 3. Anne (Elisabeth?), baronne de la Tour, femme de N, baron de Weissenbourg en 1 3 18. La baronie de Frutingen, limitrophe du Valais, forme aujourd'hui une châtellenie du canton de Berne : elle a six lieues de long, & prend son nom du bourg de Frutingen, où l'on voit le château de Felfenburg, ancienne résidence des barons de la Tour. Cette baronie avoit pour feudataires les nobles de Scharnachthall , de Stambach , d'Utendorff & de Moess.

La construction du château de Tannenfels près de Nottwil remonte à Werner II, mentionné dès 1229, prévôt de Beromünster (1234-apr. 1250). Johann, vassal des barons de Wolhusen en 1257, fut le dernier représentant de la famille. Il n'est pas établi que les propriétaires du château de Kasteln, vassaux des Habsbourg, attestés de 1290 (avec Burkhard) au milieu du XIVe s. comme successeurs juridiques des S., avec le même nom et des armoiries similaires, soient une branche bâtarde légitimée de la famille.

General Notes: Famille noble des XIIIe-XVIe s., originaire de l'Emmental et probablement apparentée aux seigneurs de Lützelflüh mentionnés entre 1120 env. et 1161. Les B. possédaient au XIIIe s. des propriétés dans la haute et moyenne vallée de l'Emme, autour du château fort de B. près de Lützelflüh. Avoués des couvents de Trub et de Rüegsau, fondés par les Lützelflüh, ils leur firent régulièrement des donations. Le premier représentant connu est Konrad, attesté de 1239 à 1257. Son petit-fils Thüring (1280-1324), bénéficiaire de Lützelflüh, perdit en 1313, pour des motifs liés à l'assassinat de l'empereur Albert Ier (1308), son fief autrichien de Spiez, mais réussit, avec l'aide de la ville de Berne et des Kibourg-Berthoud, à conserver ses possessions de l'Emmental. Au gré d'opérations de crédit parfois risquées, en menant une politique matrimoniale adroite et en s'assurant de hautes positions dans l'Eglise, la famille parvint, au XIVe s. et durant la première moitié du XVe, à étendre son pouvoir dans le Simmental d'abord, puis en Suisse orientale, en Allemagne du Sud et au Vorarlberg.

Les B. commencèrent par reprendre progressivement les possessions des seigneurs de Weissenburg: Thüring (1326-1368), époux de Katharina von Weissenburg, obtint d'abord en gage le fief de Simmenegg dans l'Obersimmental. Il entra en 1337 dans la combourgeoisie de la ville de Berne, alliance que la famille entretint jusqu'au XVIe s. Vers 1350, il acheta le bailliage de Diemtigen et, à l'aide d'emprunts, la seigneurie de Mülenen dans le Kandertal; il revendit une part à Berne en 1352 et légua le reste à son neveu Thüring (1350-1375). Son frère Heinrich (->), évêque de Constance, lui remit en gage, ainsi qu'à son autre frère Wolfhart (1341-1371) et à ses neveux, toutes les dîmes épiscopales du landgraviat de Bourgogne (1358), le château de Bischofszell (1366) et la seigneurie de Küssaberg près de Tiengen dans la Forêt-Noire (1377). De la même façon, un quatrième frère, Eberhard (->), abbé de Reichenau, fit passer dans la famille tous les biens et droits de son couvent. Soutenus par leur parenté, Heinrich et Eberhard guerroyèrent contre la ville de Constance. Comme ils l'avaient fait avec les Weissenburg, les B. reprirent une grande partie des biens et droits des comtes de Werdenberg-Sargans, en prenant prétexte du mariage de Wolfhart avec Agnès de Montfort-Feldkirch, veuve de Hartmann de Werdenberg-Sargans. En 1391, les fils de Wolfhart, Ulrich Thüring (1375-1408/1409) et Wolfhart IV (->) reçurent de leurs demi-frères ruinés, d'abord sous forme de gage, la seigneurie de Blumenegg. Suivirent bientôt le comté de Vaduz (1399), les seigneuries de Sonnenberg en Walgau (1412) et de Schellenberg (1416). L'ultime acquisition importante de la famille fut en 1437 la seigneurie de Maienfeld et le château fort de Marschlins près d'Igis, dont hérita Wolfhart V (->), lequel se mit peu après à liquider ses possessions bernoises. Comme ses ancêtres avec Berne, lui-même et surtout son fils Ulrich s'entendirent avec leurs puissants voisins autrichiens, sans rompre cependant les liens traditionnels avec Berne. Vers la fin du XVe s., la famille connut des difficultés économiques et politiques croissantes, dont le comble fut la grave défaite que leur infligèrent les Confédérés dans la guerre de Souabe. En 1509, Johannes (->), dernier du nom, vendit la seigneurie de Maienfeld aux Ligues rhétiques et en 1510, celles de Schellenberg, Vaduz et Blumenegg à son neveu Rudolf von Sulz.

General Notes: Famille comtale mentionnée du IXe au XIIe s. dont les possessions et les droits étaient concentrés principalement en Thurgovie et dans le Zürichgau, ainsi que dans le Klettgau et le Hegau. Leur château éponyme n'étant attesté qu'en 1056, les N. sont nommés Eberhardinger jusqu'à cette date, d'après leur prénom dynastique. Leur origine et les débuts de leur généalogie sont loin d'être totalement éclaircis. L'ancienneté de leurs possessions dans le Klettgau suggère des liens avec les Gerold, voire aussi avec les Hunfrid. Le premier membre supposé de la famille fut comte en 889 dans le Zürichgau (peut-être identique à Eberhard, issu de la lignée des Etichons). Sa fille présumée Reginlinde (958), épouse du duc Burchard de Souabe, puis après la mort de celui-ci (926), de son successeur le duc Hermann, entretint d'étroites relations avec le couvent d'Einsiedeln, dont les N. furent les avoués jusqu'au milieu du XIe s. Plusieurs fois investie de la charge comtale en Thurgovie et de l'avouerie impériale de Zurich, la famille se mouvait régulièrement dans l'entourage royal. La perte de l'avouerie d'Einsiedeln en 1029 l'amena à transférer progressivement l'essentiel de ses activités dans la région de la haute vallée du Rhin. Eberhard (->) fonda après 1034 une église funéraire pour son père et ses frères dans la cimetièrre de l'abbaye de Reichenau. Avec sa femme Ita, il fut aussi le fondateur du couvent d'Allerheiligen à Schaffhouse (1049), ville où il détenait depuis 1045 le droit de frapper monnaie. Comme la famille, lors de la querelle des Investitures, avait pris majoritairement parti pour les réformes engagées par le pape (Eggehard, ->), l'empereur Henri IV lui retira en 1078 le comté du Zürichgau et l'avouerie impériale. La dynastie s'éteignit en 1101/1102 avec la mort de Burkhard, fils d'Ita et d'Eberhard. Les principaux héritiers de Burkhard furent ses parents (peut-être ses neveux) Dietrich von Bürglen et Adalbert von Morisberg. En 1170, les comtes de Veringen reprirent le comté de N. et en adoptèrent aussi le nom. Leurs héritiers le vendirent en 1461 au duc Sigismond de Habsbourg. Les anciennes possessions des N. furent source de conflits, dont certains durèrent jusqu'au XIIIe s.

A partir du milieu des années 1250, des difficultés économiques le contraignirent à d'importantes cessions de biens. General Notes: Importante famille noble de l'Oberland bernois, du XIIe au XIVe s. La question de savoir si les W. descendent des barons d'Erlenbach et font partie des seigneurs indigènes qui contribuèrent au défrichement de la région est débattue. Les premiers témoignages relatifs à leurs possessions dans le Bas-Simmental (alleux et fiefs d'Erlenbach, Oberwil im Simmental, Därstetten, Diemtigen et Wimmis, château fort de W.) sont relativement tardifs (1270). Les W. étaient apparentés aux barons de Wädenswil, de la Tour et de Brandis, ainsi qu'aux comtes de Gruyère, de Nellenburg et de Thierstein. La mention isolée de Wilhelm, Ulrich et Rudolf de Albocastro dans une charte des Zähringen datant de 1175 ne suffit pas à prouver la présence de la famille à si haute époque dans le Simmental. La généalogie ne peut être établie avec certitude qu'à partir de Rudolf (mentionné de 1258 à env. 1307). Son mariage avec une fille de Konrad de Wädenswil le fit entrer en possession du fief impérial de Rothenfluh, où fut aménagé le château fort de Weissenau.

Au milieu du XIIIe s., les W. acquirent le château fort et la seigneurie de Wimmis, et au début du XIVe la châtellenie impériale de Simmenegg. Dans les querelles qui opposaient Berne aux ducs de Habsbourg-Autriche et dans d'autres conflits comme la guerre de Gümnen (1331-1333), ils prirent le plus souvent parti contre Berne. Peter, fils de Rudolf, fit partie de la suite de l'empereur Henri VII de Luxembourg et mourut en Italie. Son frère Johann (mentionné entre 1304 et env. 1341) se fit remettre le Hasli en 1311, à titre de gage impérial; après être entré au service des Habsbourg en 1318, il le reçut à titre de gage autrichien. La même année, avec ses neveux Rudolf et Johann (coseigneurs dans un héritage indivis), il entra en possession, à titre de gage, des seigneuries et châteaux forts autrichiens d'Oberhofen, Balm et Unspunnen, ainsi que de la ville d'Unterseen. Vers le milieu du XIVe s., les W. détenaient aussi la vallée de Frutigen et le château fort de Tellenbourg.

Sur le plan économique, le déclin commença dès 1318, comme en témoignent des aliénations de biens, parce que les gages autrichiens n'étaient pour une bonne part que de simples titres juridiques. Sur le plan politique, l'appartenance au camp autrichien eut des conséquences dommageables, puisque Berne appuya le soulèvement du Hasli vers 1327, puis força les W. à lui remettre ce gage en 1334. Un retrait progressif est sensible en même temps dans la région d'Interlaken, résultat également des efforts de Berne. Cette évolution aboutit en 1337 au traité de combourgeoisie avec Berne, à qui les W. remirent en gage la quasi-totalité de leurs possessions. En 1352, Johann réussit à récupérer les gages remis à Berne en échangeant la seigneurie de Frutigen contre les possessions seigneuriales dans le Simmental. Dernier descendant mâle légitime de la famille, Johann mourut vers 1370.

Guillaume de Roussillon, seigneur d'Annonay de 1271 à 1277 et de Roussillon, il fut l'époux de Béatrix de la Tour du Pin .Il est le fils d'Artaude de Forez et d'Artaud IV de Roussillon. Son grand-père maternel n'est autre que le comte Guy IV de Forez. Il a pour oncles Guy V, futur comte, et Renaud II de Forez, archevêque de Lyon. L'épouse de ce dernier, plus tard, est Isabelle de Beaujeu, cousine de Guillaume de Beaujeu, grand Maître de l'ordre du Temple. Guillaume est l'époux de Béatrix de la Tour du Pin, soeur d'Humbert de la Tour, futur Dauphin du Viennois. Béatrix est aussi apparentée à la famille de Savoie.. Ses deux frères, Aymar et Amédée étaient respectivement abbé de Cluny et évêque de Valence et de Die. Le premier devint même archevêque de Lyon.L'une de ses deux soeurs, Alix, épousa Ponce Bastet, seigneur de Crussol, dont le chastel sur le Rhône, en face de Valence, élève encore, au-dessus d'un roc à pic, des ruines appelées Cornes de Crussol. Son autre soeur, Béatrix, épousa Gaudemar II de Jarez, seigneur de Saint-Chamond. Il est envoyé en 1275, à Saint-Jean d'Acre capitale du Royaume de Jérusalem, comme envoyé du roi de France Philippe le Hardi et comme représentant des forces Françaises chargées de maintenir l'ordre entre les factions chrétiennes qui s'entre-déchirent. La deuxième croisade de Louis IX est terminée à son arrivée depuis cinq ans déjà et il va connaître un coup d'état en mai 1277 de la part de Charles d'Anjou (1227-1285), frère du roi Louis IX (1226-1270). Victime du complot fomenté par Charles d'Anjou et Guillaume de Beaujeu, le maître de l'Ordre du Temple, il n'en revint pas. La mission de Guillaume de Roussillon deviendra une affaire d'état à partir de décembre 1277. Il laissa un fils Artaud de Roussillon ; Sa veuve Béatrix de Roussillon, fille de La Tour, s'abîme dans la peine et la prière. Elle vivra un miracle durant lequel, guidée comme Marie-Madeleine par des étoiles, une croix lumineuse, fonde la chartreuse de Sainte-Croix-en-Jarez et finit ses jours dans le cloître des Pères

General Notes: Baron Ulrich died in 1212. He left several children, including a daughter, Anna (1197– 1224) and two sons, Werner II (mentioned before 1212-1214) and Heinrich (first mentioned before 1212 and died after 1234). The existence of another son named Cuno is uncertain.[5]

Ulrich's daughter Anna is probably the wife of the knight Ulrich I (mentioned from before 1218 to before 1224) from the highly respected family of Grünenberg. The majority of the Langenstein descendants had already founded their own families, such as the Balm family, a generation before. Therefore, Anna became the primary heiress to the Langenstein lands. With her marriage to Ulrich of Grünenberg, she brought the Langenstein lands into the Grünenberg family. Anna died seven days after the death of her husband, but not before her and her sons made a large donation to the Abbey of St. Urban.[6]

Après sa mort avant 1224 , ses deux fils Heinrich II l'Ancien et Markwart I von Grünenberg ont donné un abri au monastère St. Urban à Gesserswil ("Gotzratwil"); l'échelle est probablement la propriété d'une femme et vient donc de ses ancêtres, qui étaient riches là-bas.

2 - Général

Probablement l'héritière de la famille von Langenstein: Stromeier la nomme l'épouse d' Ulrich I von Grünenberg , sans clarifier les antécédents familiaux d'Anna; La classification postulée ici ou une génération plus tôt que la sœur d' Ulrich I von Langenstein est remise en question ; le fait que la majorité de la propriété Langstein soit transférée à Grünenberg témoigne d'une relation très étroite, ce qui semble être particulièrement le cas si, en tant qu'héritière du chef de famille, elle apporte le domaine Langenstein à son mari Ulrich I von Grünenberg comme héritier ; Ulrich devient le seul chef de la famille Langenstein comme ses frères Werner I. et Lütold von Langenstein entrent dans le monastère St. Urban en tant que moines.

General Notes: Famille de barons de l'Emmental, possessionnée à S. et à Ascoldesbach ou Asholtispach (probablement Escholzmatt) et tirant peut-être son nom du château (auj. disparu) situé dans la vallée de la Grünen. Premier S. connu, Walfried est mentionné en 1130 comme témoin dans l'une des premières chartes concernant le couvent de Trub. Les S. s'allièrent par mariage aux comtes de Buchegg vers la fin du XIIe s. En 1225, Lütold (décédé av. 1245), dernier représentant de la famille, permit la fondation de la commanderie de l'ordre teutonique de S. grâce à la donation des églises de S. et Escholzmatt (avec leurs dépendances) et de ses biens allodiaux. En furent exclus le fief de ses descendants illégitimes et certains biens déjà donnés à la commanderie des hospitaliers de Saint-Jean de Jérusalem de Hohenrain et à l'abbaye de Saint-Urbain. L'identification du lien entre les héritiers illégitimes de Lütold et les S. cités dès 1241, chevaliers et vassaux des Kibourg, n'est pas possible, ni par la généalogie, ni par l'histoire de la transmission des biens.

General Notes: von Rathsamhausen : Nom donné à Rudolph 1190 1220 Il y avait en Alsace, au siècle dernier, une ancienne famille de Rathsamhausen, divisée en deux branches principales dont l'une, qui avait été fondée au commencement du seizième siècle, était dénommée Ehenweyer, et l'autre Nonnenweyer; elles avaient pour souche Rodolphe 1er, chevalier (miles) de Rathsamhausen, lequel vivait encore en 1215, d'après une chronique alsacienne (1). Ses ancêtres, d'après une tradition de famille, avaient porté d'abord un autre nom qui aurait été converti en celui de Rathsamhausen par un empereur d'Allemagne dont Rodolphe était le compagnon d'armes. L'empereur, pendant une guerre, se trouvant en Alsace et dans une forte position protégée par les Vosges, était sur le point d'en sortir pour livrer une bataille, lorsque Rodolphe l'en disuada en lui disant : Rathsam su hauzen, ce qui signifiait : un bon conseil à vous donner, c'est de rester ici. Grâce à ce conseil qui fut suivi, l'armée impériale attendit l'ennemi dans cette position et remporta le lendemain une victoire. L'Empereur aurait dit alors à son homme d'armes : Puisque tu m'as bien conseillé, tu t'appelleras désormais Rathsamhausen, et je te donne pour domaine le territoire où nous sommes (qui comprenait les localités appelées depuis Müttersholz et Rathsamhausen).

General Notes: Famille de barons, attestée du XIe au XVIe s., qui doit son nom au château fort de Hohenhewen près d'Engen dans le Hegau. Les seigneurs de H. s'appelaient à l'origine seigneurs d'Engen (1050) et ce n'est qu'après la construction de leur château qu'ils se donnèrent le nom de H. (1174). La ville d'Engen et les villages environnants constituaient le noyau de la seigneurie. On ignore quel genre de relations les H. entretenaient avec les Zähringen et les Staufen. En 1291, Rudolf von H. devint vassal de la maison de Habsbourg, qu'il servit comme juge au tribunal de la cour (1313) et émissaire du roi (1322). Vers 1365, la famille acquit la seigneurie de Griesenberg en Thurgovie et, en 1428, celle de Hohentrins dans les Grisons. En 1398, elle remit en gage la seigneurie de H. au duc Léopold de Habsbourg, qui la vendit en 1404 au comte Hans de Lupfen. Ensuite, les H., surtout Heinrich, évêque de Constance (->), se disputèrent en vain avec les comtes de Lupfen pour récupérer leur seigneurie, revendication à laquelle Peter renonça définitivement après son mariage avec Agnes de Lupfen en 1477. La famille, qui posséda des parties de la seigneurie de Werdenberg dans la vallée du Rhin (1498-1517), s'éteignit en 1570 avec Albert Arbogast.

Les messieurs de H. descendent très probablement des messieurs d'Engen, qui avaient été avec Adelbero et ses fils Burchard et Bertold dans le sillage des comtes de Nellenburg. De leur témoignage en matière des Nellenburg, de leur proximité avec les Zähringers avant 1100, ainsi que de leurs relations avec le Reformkl.n Allerheiligen à Schaffhouse et St. Georgen, on doit conclure que les seigneurs d'Engen étaient évidemment proches de la réforme grégorienne, Même si la tradition des premiers messieurs de H. rompt en 1138, il semble probable, sur la base de considérations historiques ainsi que de la survie des principaux noms Bertold et Burkhard, que les hommes du même nom apparaissant après 1174 en succession généalogique directe de l'ancienne noblesse engen se tenait. Entre 1174 et 1193 un Hegauadliger est apparu alternativement comme Bertold von Engen et Berthold von H. . Ce changement de nom fluide suggère que sa famille a déménagé du village d'Engen à Hegauberg H. (846 m) vers 1170/75. Néanmoins, jusqu'en 1189, Bertold s'appelait toujours après l'ancien siège.

General Notes: Famille noble de la région zurichoise et de l'Oberland bernois, dont certains représentants furent parfois appelés baillis d'Unspunnen dès 1240. Les sources ne permettent pas de reconstituer une généalogie en ligne agnatique. Des liens existaient probablement avec la classe dirigeante qui se déplaçait d'une région à l'autre, gravitant autour des clans formés par les familles nobles de Rapperswil, Strättligen et Wolhusen. Les W. étaient apparentés aux barons de Thoune, Bürglen, Eschenbach-Schnabelburg, Wolhusen et Balm, ainsi qu'avec les chevaliers de Hüenberg et Büttikon. On ne peut pas établir un lien généalogique entre les frères Walter, Eberhard, Burkhard et Rudolf, mentionnés pour la première fois dans un manuscrit antérieur de 1130, et les W. qui apparaissent après 1200.

Dans la région zurichoise, la famille n'apparaît guère avant le milieu du XIIIe s., ce qui n'appuie en rien l'hypothèse de possessions ancestrales locales sur les rives du lac de Zurich, qui auraient compris les villages de Wädenswil, Richterswil, Schönenberg et Hütten, ainsi qu'une partie de Hirzel et d'Uetikon am See. De même, le château de W., construit après 1200, n'est mentionné qu'en 1265. Dans cette perspective, la seigneurie dans l'Oberland bernois, formée à la suite du mariage, vers 1224, de Rudolf avec Ita von Unspunnen, semble avoir représenté une occasion de saisir de nouvelles opportunités après les échecs subis dans les conflits autour de la seigneurie de Rapperswil. On pensait autrefois que la famille se serait divisée en plusieurs branches à la suite du partage de la seigneurie entre les fils de Rudolf, Walter, Rudolf et Konrad (->) vers 1240; cependant, cette théorie se base trop fortement sur un modèle de dynastie agnatique. Dans l'Oberland bernois, les possessions des W. se concentraient autour d'Interlaken, Grindelwald et la vallée de Lauterbrunnen. Elles comprenaient aussi les châteaux et seigneuries d'Uttigen, Frutigen et Mülinen, ainsi que, dès le milieu du XIIIe s., des biens épars autour de Willisau.

Certains W. sont cités dans l'entourage des Hohenstaufen et des comtes de Habsbourg. Ils étaient vassaux du Fraumünster de Zurich, ainsi que vassaux et sénéchaux de l'abbaye d'Einsiedeln. Ils détenaient la basse juridiction sur les sujets d'Einsiedeln établis dans la seigneurie de W. et l'avouerie du chapitre d'Amsoldingen. Dès la seconde moitié du XIIIe s., on constate un déclin économique, aussi bien dans la région de Zurich que dans l'Oberland bernois, avec de nombreuses ventes de biens et de droits seigneuriaux. En 1287, Rudolf vendit ses biens à la commanderie des hospitaliers de Saint-Jean de Jérusalem de Bubikon. La branche zurichoise (pour autant que l'on puisse l'appeler ainsi) s'éteignit à sa mort en 1297. Johann, l'un des petits-fils de Konrad, dernier représentant mâle de la famille de barons, mourut vers 1335.

General Notes: ARTAUD [IV] de Roussillon, son of ARTAUD [III] Seigneur de Roussillon & his wife Alix de Glâne ([1200/05]-after 1270). A charter dated 1219 records an agreement between the bishop of Lyon and "Arthaudum de Roussillon" concerning "vicarium de Dalgoiricum", with the consent of "Artaudi filii sui...qui in tutela nostra [=Raynaudus...Lugdunensis ecclesiae minister] erat"[1517]. The circumstances in which Artaud was under the guardianship of the bishop of Lyon, even though his father was still alive, are unclear. "Erat" in the document indicates that the guardianship had ended, maybe just before the signing of the document, and that Artaud junior was then of age. A charter dated 1220 records an agreement between the bishop of Lyon and "Arthaudum de Rossillione" concerning "terra de Riviria pro dote uxoris suæ" and damage caused by "Pontius de Glana pater uxoris suæ", with the consent of "Arthaudus filio eiusdem Arthaudi"[1518]. Seigneur de Roussillon et de Riverie. "Artaud de Roussillon et Girard de Roussillon" (presumably brothers) reached agreement under which Géraud received "le droit...sur les châteaux de Montbreton et de Perau et sur les villages de Champagne et de Saint-Rambert" in return for renouncing his rights "sur le château de Roussillon" by charter dated 30 Jan 1235 (O.S.)[1519]. A charter dated Feb 1235 (O.S.) records an agreement between "Aymard seigneur d'Annonay, et Aymard seigneur de Bressieu" and "Artaud seigneur de Roussillon, et Pons Charpinelle" concerning "[le] château de Dargoire"[1520]. "Artaudus de Rossillon" donated "sextam partem portus Lugdunensis", held by "ego et Artaudus pater meus", to "Willelmo de Palude canonico Sancti Stephani Lugdunensis et prepositio S. Thome de Foroveteri" by charter dated Jun 1236[1521]. A charter dated May 1251 records the donation to the priory of Saint-Sauveur-en-Rue of "molendinum de Givret juxta las Moleyres" and the appointment of "dominum Artaudum et Vuilielmum filium suum de Rossilion et Guigoni Pagani dominum d'Argentau" as guarantors, witnessed by "domina M. comitissa uxor prædicti domini Artaudi de Rossilion"[1522]. "Artaudus dominus de Rossillon et de Riviereia" confirmed that "Guigo frater meus archidiaconus Lugdunensis" held property "in portu pontis Rodani Lugdunensis", and committed to swearing homage for this land to the church of Lyon, by charter dated 25 Oct 1252[1523]. "...Artaudus de Rossillon..." witnessed the testament of "Willelmus comes Gebenn." (who, under the hypothesis suggested below, would have been Artaud's father-in-law) dated 9 Nov 1252[1524]. "Artaud sire de Roussillon...Aymar, Amédée, Alyse et Beatrix ses enfants" donated their rights "sur la succession de feu Guy comte de Forez" to "Guillaume fils dudit Artaud" by charter dated Nov 1262[1525]. It is assumed that this document refers to Guy [V] Comte de Forez, who died childless in 1259 leaving his brother Renaud as his heir, not his father Guy [IV] (who died in 1241) or his paternal grandfather Guy [III] (who died in [1202]). However, as Renaud Comte de Forez had male children at that date it is unclear why the involvement of the Roussillon family in the Forez inheritance was considered relevant at that time. It should be noted that Guillaume de Roussillon, son of Artaud [IV], is named in the Jun 1270 of Renaud Comte de Forez as one of the possible beneficiaries and heirs (see below). A charter dated 1267 records a peace agreement between "dom. Guignonem dalphinum Viennensem" and "dom. Arthaudum de Rossilione et Guillelmum filium eius" concerning "castro Ruppis de Cluey", as part of the terms for ending the war waged by "Ay[mari] de Pictavia"[1526]. A charter dated 1267 records that "Artaudus dominus Rossilionis" granted "in domo de Landrus et in villa et parrochia de Espinosa" to "dom. Guigoni dalphino", presumably as part of the same peace settlement although this is not mentioned in the extract [1527]. Vachez records that Artaud de Roussillon acted as guarantor for "Thomas et Amédée de Savoie" debtors of the king of France in 1270[1528]. A charter dated 7 Aug 1274 records the confirmation of the donation of "molendinum de Givret juxta las Moleyras" and names "Artaudi domini de Rossilione, Gulielmi de Rossilione, et...dominæ M. comitissæ uxoris prædicti domini Artaudi de Rossilione et Guigonis Pagani"[1529]. It is unclear from this document whether Artaud was still alive at that date: he probably was not.

m ([before 1238]) [as her second husband,] M---, [widow of --- Comte,] daughter of --- ([before 1223]-after May 1251, maybe [Nov 1262/Jun 1270]). The wife of Artaud [IV] Seigneur de Roussillon is referred to in the charter dated May 1251 which records the donation to the priory of Saint-Sauveur-en-Rue of "molendinum de Givret juxta las Moleyres" and the appointment of "dominum Artaudum et Vuilielmum filium suum de Rossilion et Guigoni Pagani dominum d'Argentau" as guarantors, witnessed by "domina M. comitissa uxor prædicti domini Artaudi de Rossilion"[1530]. A charter dated 7 Aug 1274 records the confirmation of the donation of "molendinum de Givret juxta las Moleyras" and names "Artaudi domini de Rossilione, Gulielmi de Rossilione, et...dominæ M. comitissæ uxoris prædicti domini Artaudi de Rossilione et Guigonis Pagani"[1531]. Vachez states that Artaud [IV]'s wife was "Marie"[1532], although he cites no primary source which indicates that "M" in the source quoted above represents an abbreviation for "Maria". The possible family origin of "M---" provides an intriguing puzzle. Different primary source documents indicate family relationships between the Roussillon family and both the Forez and Genève families. It looks likely that these relationships were through "M---". Dealing firstly with the Roussillon/Forez relationship. This is indicated by the testament of "Raynaudus comes Forensis et dominus Bellijoci", dated Jun 1270, which names "Guidonem consanguinem meum dominum de Tyerno" as his heir in substitution and states that, if he inherits, he should provide for "domino Guidoni de Tyerno consanguineo meo canonico Lugdunensis...Hugoni de Tyerno consanguineo meo fratri eiusdem canonici Guidonis...consanguineo meo domino Ano domino d'Oliergue...Guillelmo de Rossilione consanguineo meo" (the last-named being identified as the son of Artaud [IV] Seigneur de Roussillon)[1533]. The relationship with the comtes de Forez is also confirmed by the charter dated Nov 1262, under which "Artaud sire de Roussillon...Aymar, Amédée, Alyse et Beatrix ses enfants" donated their rights "sur la succession de feu Guy comte de Forez" to "Guillaume fils dudit Artaud"[1534]. It is reasonable to suppose that the Roussillon/Forez relationship was through an otherwise unrecorded daughter of Guy [III] Comte de Forez, based on the following logic. Firstly, it is not known with certainty whether the Roussillon/Forez connection was through the father or mother of Guillaume de Roussillon. However, the charter dated Nov 1262 suggests that the relationship was through his mother: if Artaud [IV] himself had been the relative of the Forez family, it seems that this charter would have been unnecessary as Artaud could automatically have transferred his rights to Forez to his oldest son by testament. Artaud's presence in the document does not necessarily indicate that he held the rights in his own name: they could have been held through his wife. If that is correct, presumably "M---" was still alive in Nov 1262. If she had been dead, her rights would already have vested in her children so her husband's presence in the document would have been unnecessary (unless he was acting in the name of any children who were still minors). Secondly, the order of beneficiaries in the Jun 1270 testament of Renaud Comte de Forez is presumably significant in determining the nature of the connection with the Roussillon family. The document provides for bequests, in order, to "consanguineo meo domino Ano domino d'Oliergue...Guillelmo de Rossilione consanguineo meo". The former is identified as Agnon [VI] Seigneur d'Olliergues, the senior male representative of the descendants of the oldest daughter of Guy [III] Comte de Forez who married Guillaume de Baffie (see AUVERGNE for the Baffie and Olliergues families). It is likely therefore that "Guillelmo de Rossilione consanguineo meo" was in some way junior to Agnon [VI] in his rights to the Forez inheritance. The marriage of Artaud [IV] Seigneur de Roussillon is dated to [before 1238], which suggests that his wife is unlikely to have been born much later than [1220]. If that date is correct, and assuming at present that the family relationship was through Artaud's wife, the chronology of the Olliergues family suggests that it is improbable that "M---" was an otherwise unrecorded younger sister of Agnon [VI]'s mother. There appear to be two other possibilities: either Artaud's wife was the daughter of an otherwise unrecorded younger daughter of Guy [III] Comte de Forez, or she was the granddaughter of a younger sibling of Comte Guy [III]. The former is the most likely possibility: all the other beneficiaries under the Jun 1270 testament of Renaud Comte de Forez were descendants of his grandfather, and it seems unlikely that Comte Renaud would have considered it necessary to provide in his testament for another family representative who was descended from his great-grandfather. In conclusion, until further information comes to light, if the relationship between the Roussillon and Forez families was through Artaud [IV] de Roussillon's wife, it is likely that she was the daughter of an otherwise unrecorded younger daughter of Guy [III] Comte de Forez. Turning to the Roussillon/Genève family connection, this is suggested by an undated charter under which "Amédée de Genève Evesque de Die" (identified as the son of Comte Guillaume [II]) is called "oncle d'Amédée de Roussillon" (who was a younger son of Artaud [IV] Seigneur de Roussillon)[1535]. The testament of "Thomas de Sabaudia primogenitus...domini Thomæ de Sabaudia comitis", dated 14 May 1282, which names "consanguineum meum R. patrem dominum Aymarum archiepiscopum Lugdunensem" (the latter identified as another younger son of Artaud [IV] Seigneur de Roussillon) also indicates a connection as the relationship with the Savoie family was presumably through the comtes de Genève[1536]. Vachez approaches a conclusion when he states that Artaud [IV]'s wife was "Marie de Genève, fille de Guillaume Comte de Genève et de Marie ou Alix de la Tour"[1537]. However, his explanation is contradictory and confusing. He asserts firstly that the marriage of Artaud [IV] with "Marie" was childless (nullifying completely his explanation for the relationship which is stated in the undated charter) and secondly that Artaud's children were born from a supposed second marriage with "Artaude de Forez, fille de Guy IV comte de Forez", presumably in an attempt to explain the presence of Guillaume de Roussillon in the Jun 1270 testament of Renaud Comte de Forez. The major problem with identifying Guillaume [II] Comte de Genève as the father of "M---" is the number of children attributed to Comte Guillaume and his known wife which makes it difficult to explain why "M---" and her descendants should have been singled out in relation to the Forez inheritance. However, this difficulty would be resolved if the daughter of Guy [III] Comte de Forez was the first wife of Comte Guillaume, and the mother of a single daughter, her husband marrying again after she died. If all these speculations are correct, Artaud's wife would be M---, daughter of Guillaume [II] Comte de Genève & his [first] wife --- de Forez. It should be emphasised that this conclusion is speculative and that other alternatives are possible, particularly if the Roussillon/Forez family connection was through Artaud [IV] himself. One last point concerns the title "comitissa" accorded to Artaud's wife in the 1251 and 1274 sources which are quoted above. There are two possible explanations. Firstly, the word could suggest that "M---" was the widow of an unidentified "comes" when she married Artaud, and retained the title as a matter of courtesy after her [second] marriage. It is unlikely that she would have held the title in her own right as heiress to a "comes", as there is no record of the title being transmitted to her son. Secondly, if she was related to the Genève family, "comitissa" could have been a corruption of "Contesson/Comtessone", a family nickname which was used by "Beatrix dite Comtessone" another possible daughter of Guillaume [II] Comte de Genève.

Il fut cité en 1237/1263. La ville du Péage de Roussillon tire son nom de la taxe et des redevances que percevait le Seigneur de ROUSSILLON et qu'il levait sur les personnes, les animaux et les marchandises passant sur le territoire de la seigneurie. Ce péage avait été, entres autres, concédé à Guigues de ROUSSILLON par l'Empereur Frédéric [Barberousse] en 1178. Le 2 juillet 1209 Artaud de ROUSSILLON s'engagea envers le Légat du Saint-Siège à observer tout ce que le Pape avait prescrit des péages et des sauf-conduits accordés aux marchands étrangers (guidage). Mais au cours de l'année 1233 Artaud et Girard de ROUSSILLON furent excommuniés par l'Archevêque de Vienne pour des exactions commises, en leur nom, dans la perception du Péage de Roussillon et leurs biens furent saisis. Pour être relevés de cette sentence, ils se soumirent, prirent l'engagement de ne plus exercer aucune perception illégale sur le Péage et jurèrent de ne plus se rendre coupable de tels méfaits. En 1236 Artaud et Girard de ROUSSILLON se partagèrent les biens qu'ils possédaient en indivision, mais chacun garda ses droits sur le péage et le guidage.(Dhuicque) Sources : personne: E. Grand Sénéchal des royaumes d'Arles et de Vienne en 1257

ALBERT [III] de la Tour-du-Pin ([1180/85]-[Apr 1259/Jun 1260]). He is referred to but not named in his father's [1190] testament, when he was under age. "Albertus dominus de Turre...Albertus filius meus" donated property to the priory of Ynimont by charter dated 1202[2065]. The likely birth date of his wife Beatrix suggests that Albert [III] was probably still a child at the time of his first betrothal, suggesting his birth in [1190]. Seigneur de la Tour-du-Pin. Seneschal of the kingdom of Arles and Vienne. "Albertus de Turre, dominus de Turre et Coligniaco et Beatrix uxor mea et filii" confirmed purchases of property by the bishop of Belley by charter dated 1228[2067]. "Albert seigneur de la Tour et son fils Albert" donated revenue to Notre-Dame d'Ambronay, for the soul of "leur épouse et mère Béatrix", by charter dated Jan 1241 (O.S.)[2068]. "Hugo...Claramontanus episcopus et Humbertus dominus Bellijoci, et Arbertus dominus de Turre, et Guido archidiaconus Lugdunensis, et Arbertus de Turre, et Hugo senescalcus Lugdunensis fratres" agreed an alliance under a charter dated Sep 1246[2069]. "Albers Segnor de la Tor et Albers son filz" swore homage to "Monseignor Perron de Savoye" by charter dated Sep 1250[2070]. "Albert le jeune seigneur de la Tour et de Coligny", on the advice of "son père Albert de la Tour, de ses frères Hugues de la Tour sénéchal de Lyon, et Humbert de la Tour" granted freedoms to his town of Treffort en Bresse by charter dated Apr 1259[2071]. Aynarda quondam uxor Audemari de Brisseu et mater Audemari pueri" and "Arberto de Turre...filiam suam" is dated 1198, and provides that if the prospective bridegroom died before the marriage, "Arbertus filius Arberti" would marry "sororem dicti Audemari"[2072]. m (before 4 May 1220) BEATRIX de Coligny, daughter of HUGUES Seigneur de Coligny-le-Neuf & his wife Beatrix d'Albon Dauphine de Viennois, Ctss d'Albon ([1194/95 or soon after]-[1240/Jan 1242]). "Albertus de Turre filius Alberti de Turre et Comitissæ filiæ Roberti comitis Arvernîæ" confirmed donations to the Chartreuse de Portes by "Hugonis de Coliniaco" on the occasion of his marriage to "filiæ eius Beatricis" by undated charter[2073]. Her birth date is estimated bearing in mind her mother's age when she married Beatrix's father. "Albertus de Turre, dominus de Turre et Coligniaco et Beatrix uxor mea et filii" confirmed purchases of property by the bishop of Belley by charter dated 1228[2074]. She was named as deceased in her husband's donation dated Jan 1241 (O.S.), cited above. The estimated birth date of her son Humbert suggests that Béatrix died giving birth to him. General Notes: Importante famille de barons de la Haute-Argovie, pour partie héritiers (et donc sans doute parents) des barons de Langenstein. On mentionne deux lignées principales, les Schnabel et les Grimmen, qui se divisent en plusieurs rameaux. La famille tire son nom du château fort de G., au-dessus de Melchnau, auquel était rattachée une petite seigneurie foncière et justicière. A cet alleu vinrent s'ajouter des terres à Sursee et (avant le milieu du XVe s.) à Uri. Les G. étaient apparentés aux barons d'Aarburg, de Balm et de Wolhusen, auxquels ils succédèrent au milieu du XIVE s., ainsi qu'aux seigneurs d'Aarwangen, dont ils furent aussi les héritiers.

Les plus anciens représentants attestés, morts avant 1224, sont Walther Ier et Heinrich Ier, qui donnèrent des biens à l'abbaye de Saint-Urbain (fondation des Langenstein), où se trouvait leur caveau familial. Dès le début du XIV^e s., les G. se lièrent plus étroitement aux Habsbourg-Autriche, position qui les conduira à leur perte lors de la guerre de Zurich (1436-1450). La branche cadette fut quelque temps au service des Kibourg; elle remonte à Markwart Ier (1224 env.-apr. 1252), qui hérita de la partie sud du patrimoine. Parmi ses descendants, la lignée des Schnabel joua le rôle le plus en vue. Cette branche s'éteignit avec Hemmann (vers 1414).

General Notes: Famille noble de Haute-Argovie éteinte au XIII^e s. et portant le nom du château de L. (commune de Melchnau). D'anciens liens de parenté avec les barons de Grünenberg sont probables en raison de la proximité des châteaux de L. et de Grünenberg (formant avec celui de Schnabelburg une triple forteresse) et de l'héritage des L. La famille s'allia avec les barons de Balm, de même qu'avec les seigneurs de Kapfenberg. Leurs alleux se situaient essentiellement dans la vallée du Rot et de la Langeten. Les dépendances de l'église privée de Kleinroth (dans l'ancienne commune d'Untersteckholz, commune de Langenthal) et d'autres biens permirent aux frères Ulrich, Werner et Lütold de fonder un couvent cistercien entre 1191 et 1194. Celui-ci fut transféré à Saint-Urbain après 1194. Werner et Lütold entrèrent alors dans l'ordre cistercien. Dernier représentant laïque de la famille, Ulrich mourut avant 1212.

General Notes: Famille noble bernoise, éteinte en 1342. Le nom de R. était celui de l'une des deux moitiés de la juridiction de Trachselwald. Copropriétaires (probablement par héritage) du château fort de Trachselwald, les R. possédaient des biens et des droits autour de Steffisburg; ils tenaient en fief à Rohrbach des terres et des charges (avouerie, mayorie) de l'abbaye de Saint-Gall. Ils servirent les comtes de Kibourg, puis de Kibourg-Berthoud. Des liens matrimoniaux les unissaient aux barons de Signau et de Balm ainsi qu'aux chevaliers de Thorberg. Ils apparaissent en 1226 avec Cono, dont la seigneurie sera partagée à sa mort entre ses fils Dietrich Ier (mentionné de 1250 à env. 1279), Werner (mentionné de 1248 à 1274) et Berthold (->). En 1313, Dietrich II fut privé de ses charges et fiefs à Rohrbach, à l'instigation des Habsbourg-Autriche, parce qu'il était le beau-frère du régicide Rudolf von Balm. Les R. ne s'en relevèrent pas.

Les L. avaient probablement des ancêtres communs avec les Trostberg. La famille est documentée pour la première fois en 1241 avec Burkhard. Son représentant le plus marquant fut le poète latin Rudolf (->). Hemman (cité depuis 1382) survécut à la bataille de Sempach et parvint à conserver sa seigneurie. Plus tard encore, il s'opposa avec succès aux Confédérés. La lignée masculine s'éteignit avec lui en 1433. Gottfried, le plus ancien membre connu, est mentionné comme témoin en 1189 dans un acte de donation (généralement considéré comme un faux) en faveur du couvent de Schöntal. Au cours de la première moitié du XIIIe s., la famille se scinda en deux branches que distinguèrent les ajouts apportés à leur nom. Le château de Blochmont (au-dessus de Kiffis, Alsace), fief des comtes de Ferrette, servit à désigner la première et celui de Madeln (au-dessus de Pratteln), fief des Habsbourg, l'autre qui adopta le nom d'E. Pratteln dans la seconde moitié du XIVe s. eu égard à ses possessions.

General Notes: Schoepflin 1761: Hugues, fils domini Rudolphi de Lobegazza, vivait en 1183. On connaît un Nibelungus de Lobigassen, en 1186; un Hugues de Lunbegazen, en 1235. En 1251, Wernher de Lobegassen, chevalier, assista à une transaction qui eut lieu entre Ulric I, comte de Ferrette, et l'Église de Strasbourg. Richard de Lobegassen, strenuus miles, reçut en gage de l'abbaye de Murbach divers revenus de Bergholtz, en 1281. Les nobles de Hus et de Hadstatt causèrent de grands dommages aux milites de Lobigasse, en 1303. En 1316, l'évêque de Strasbourg avait fait prisonnier trois Lobegassen, Rodolphe dit Austriacus, Rodolphe dit de Wulversheim, et Hesson. Parmi ceux qui se présentèrent pour leur servir de caution étaient Nybelung-le-Jeune de Lobegassen, chevalier, et Jean de Lobegassen, prêtre, qui fournirent à l'évêque une garantie de 600 marcs d'argent. Henri, éueyer, fils d'Eberlin, chevalier de Lobegassen, possédait, au milieu du quatorzième siècle, à Rouffach, Artzenheim, etc., des fiefs mouvants de l'évêché de Strasbourg.

General Notes: Famille d'Achtburger (patriciens non nobles) de Bâle, attestée depuis le milieu du XIIIe s. Parvenus à l'aisance grâce au commerce et à la banque, les Z. acquirent des fiefs dans les environs de Bâle, notamment, en 1301, la seigneurie de Wartenberg en arrière-fief (jusqu'en 1371). Quatre Z. occupèrent la charge de premier prévôt des corporations, dont Konrad (->), qui fut en plus bourgmestre de Bâle, et son fils Hug (->). Les Z. se mariaient dans des familles d'Achtburger et aussi dans des familles nobles de la ville et des environs. Dans le deuxième quart du XVe s., ils connurent un déclin rapide. Les derniers furent Georg, décapité en 1461 pour vol avec meurtre, et son frère Konrad, cité pour la dernière fois en 1470; tous deux gagnaient leur vie comme mercenaires.

General Notes: HUGO von Tübingen, son of HUGO [IV] Pfalzgraf von Tübingen & his wife Elisabeth von Bregenz (- 12 Mar [1230/34]). "Hugo comes de Monteforti et carnalis frater eius Rudolfus...palatinus Tüwingen et mater eorum" donated property to St Gallen by charter dated 24 Jun 1209, witnessed by "...comes Diethalmus junior de Togginburg..."[1299]. Graf von Bregenz 1191. Graf von Montfort 1208.

m MECHTILD, daughter of ---. Her marriage is confirmed by the charter dated 20 Dec 1251 under which [her daughter] "Elisabet comitissa de Werde" donated property to Kloster Salem and renounced certain rights for the souls of "patris nostri Hugonis comitis de Monfort necnon matris nostre Metilde et omnium fratrum et sororum nostrarum"[1300]. The Manuel généalogique pour servir à l'histoire de la Suisse suggests that she may have been "Tochter des Edelherren Walther von Schnabelburg und Schwester des Walther von Eschenbach und des Berthold von Schabelburg(-Schwarzenberg)"[1301]. This speculation is based on an imprecise relationship between the Montfort and Schnabelberg families which is indicated by the following charter: "Hugo comes Montisfortis" [Hugo [II], see below] recognised the rights of Kloster Kappel in certain property, naming "consanguinei nostri Ulrici de Snelburch", by charter dated 8 Sep 1247[1302]. According to Europäische Stammtafeln, Hugo [I] married twice: firstly "[--- von Eschenbach-Schnabelberg]", and secondly "Mechtild von Wangen, daughter of Friedrich von Wangen"[1303]. The basis for this information has not been ascertained and no indication has been found in the primary sources consulted that Hugo [I] married twice. It should be noted that, if the speculation about the Eschenbach-Schnabelberg connection is limited to the information shown above, Hugo's supposed first wife would have been called Mechtild which suggests that some confusion lies behind the Europäische Stammtafeln suggestion.

Famille comtale du Vorarlberg des XIIIe-XVIIIe s. dont les propriétés s'étendaient du nord-est du lac de Constance au pays de Sargans et comprenaient Bregenz et Feldkirch. Le premier à porter le nom de M. fut Hugo (mentionné en 1188, DCD av. 1228), fils de Hugo de Tübingen (DCD1182) et d'Elisabeth de Bregenz. Lors d'un partage entre lui et son frère Rudolf de Tübingen vers 1200, il prit possession d'une grande partie des anciens domaines des comtes de Bregenz et fonda ainsi la lignée des comtes de M. Il est attesté pour la première fois comme comte de M. en 1208. Lui et son fils Hugo (mentionné entre 1237 et 1259) s'efforcèrent de consolider leur seigneurie. Ces efforts sont attestés dès 1209 par l'apparition de ministériaux, dont les chevaliers de M. (non apparentés) et les maréchaux de M. (dès 1234); la fondation de la ville de résidence de Feldkirch (vers 1190) et le développement de celle de Bregenz (fin du XIIe s.) vont dans la même direction. Des partages d'héritage et la pression croissante des Habsbourg durant le dernier quart du XIIIe s. empêchèrent la création d'une grande seigneurie.

General Notes: LÜTOLD [IV] von Regensberg (-[Palestine] [13 Jan 1217/6 May 1219]). "Comes Liutoldus de Reginsberc et filius suus eiusdem nominis" confirmed an earlier donation to Zürich St. Maria, but now divided the benefit with another religious institution, by charter dated 16 Apr 1209[686]. A charter dated 13 Jan 1217 confirms that "dominus Liutoldus de Reginsberch et filius suus eiusdem nominis" donated "predium in Rinte" to "Premonstratensium ordinem" to found a monastery[687]. The location and timing of the death of Lütold [IV] are indicated by the charter dated 6 May 1219 under which [his half-brother] "Eberhardus...Salzepurgensis archiepiscopus" confirmed the donation of property in "Rinte" to "fratribus Premonstratensis" made by "dominus Liutoldus de Regensberch frater noster couterinus", noting that the latter had died "in transmarinis partibus" and was succeeded by "Liutoldus de Regensberch filius eius"[688]. m ---. The primary source which confirms the identity of Lütold's wife beyond doubt has not been identified. It is possible that she was --- von Kirburg, daughter of Hartmann [III] Graf von Dillingen & his wife Richenza von Lenzburg. An indication of a relationship between the Dillingen/Kiburg and Regensberg families is provided by the charter dated [24 Sep/31 Dec] 1253 under which "H [artmannus] comes senior de Kiburc" [identified as Hartmann [III] Graf von Kiburg] granted property "in Tunreton et in Altorf" to "nepotem meum L. beate memorie seniore[m] de Regensperc et filios suos" [identified as Lutold [V] von Regensberg][689]. From a chronological point of view, it appears impossible for Lutold [V] to have been the nephew of Hartmann [III]. It is likely therefore that the connection was through an earlier generation and that "nepotem" in this document should be interpreted in an extended sense. Nabholz indicates that "G. v. Wyss" (no precise citation reference) suggested that the wife of Lutold [IV] was "eine Vatersschwester Hartmanns des Aeltern"[690]. This appears to be only one of many possible family relationships so the suggestion cannot be taken as certain. Lütold [IV]

Il possédait à cette propriété de temps et des droits dans de nombreuses régions de Zürichgau, en Thurgovie, Klettgau et bien dans l'Argovie. L'ancien siège de la famille a été considérablement élargi, a reçu une pierre de Béring, une citerne et de nouvelles structures économiques. Même la tour de Altburg a été soigneusement taillée en pierre de taille ré-exécuté. Le titre de comte adopté par Lütold IV au début du 13e siècle témoigne de la puissance qu'avaient acquise ces seigneurs, une puissance fondée sur les biens et les droits qu'ils possédaient dans un vaste territoire, s'étendant du Klettgau et de la Thurgovie à l'embouchure de l'Aar, peut-être même à l'Oberland bernois et à l'Emmental. L'empire des Regensberg se refléta également dans certaines alliances conjugales, avec la maison comtale des Kybourg par exemple, ainsi que dans la fondation du couvent de Rüti. Ils avaient des biens sur la rive droite du lac de Thoune et dans la vallée de Grindelwald . Il y avait une idée plus ancienne de son origine, qui a depuis été remise en question, selon laquelle la famille était issue des comtes de Barga en Haute-Bourgogne . L'hypothèse selon laquelle il s'agissait d'une branche latérale des comtes de Kyburg a également été rejetée.]Une hypothèse plus récente voit un groupe noble de Suisse orientale, qui s'est installé à Thoune vers 1200. Les frères Werner (adultes 1130-1146) et Ulrich von Thun (adultes 1133) appartiennent à la première génération connue. La dernière génération connue était composée des trois frères Burkhard, Konrad et Heinrich. Burkard était le seigneur d'Unspunnen de 1221 à 1236. Son frère était le 16e abbé du monastère d'Einsiedeln sous le nom de Konrad I à partir de 1213; il est décédé le 13 ou 14 mai 1234. "Dominus Willelmus Gebenensis...frater Humberti comitis Gebenensis" issued letters of protection to Chamonix by charter dated 13 Mar 1205, naming "pater eius Willelmus comes Gebennensis bone memorie"[115]. Comte de Genève. The previously quoted document shows that Guillaume did not share power with his brother as count immediately after the death of their father. "Humbertus et Willelmus fratres et comites Gebenn." granted the prior of Saint-Victor the right to fortify the monastery by charter dated 1220[116]. "Willelmus comes Gebennensis" swore homage to the archbishop of Tarantasia for the valley of Hauteluze, with the consent of "dominus Amedeus...Maurianensis episcopus frater noster", by charter dated 30 Jul 1220[117]. "G. comes Gebenn." donated property to the bishopric of Geneva by charter dated 6 Jul 1223, witnessed by "uxoris sue"[118]. Avoué of Chamonix. "Willelmus comes Gebenn." obtained a loan from the monastery of Saint-Victor by charter dated 16 Feb 1228 which names "Rodulfum filium meum...et dominam comitissam" among the guarantors[119]. "Willelmus...comes Gebenn." recognised a loan from the monastery of Saint-Victor, confirmed by "A. comitissa...Rodulfus filius comitis", by charter dated 13 Jan 1231, witnessed by "eiusdem uxor Alaysia comitissa"[120]. "Vullielmus comes Gebenn., Ales uxor nostra et Rodulphus filius noster" granted compensation to the bishopric of Geneva for the wrongs which they had committed by charter dated Feb 1236[121]. "Petrus de Sabaudia" and "Guillelmus comes Geben., Rodulphus et Henricus filii dicti comitis" appointed "D. "Villemus comes Gebennensis" confirmed the foundation of the Chartreuse monastery of Pomiers by "Villemo patre meo", with the consent of "Alesia comitissa uxor mea et Rodulphus filius noster primogenitus cum filiis nostris...Amedeo...episcopi Diensi, Aymone cantore Gebennensi, Henrico, Roberto canonico Viennensi, Villelmo, Guigone", for the soul of "Humberti fratris nostri quondam comitis Gebennensis", by charter dated 1252 [124]. [m firstly --- de Forez, daughter of GUY [III] Comte de Forez [Albon] & his second wife Adelasia ---. This possible first marriage of Comte Guillaume [II] is speculative, but it provides the best explanation for the different primary source documents which indicate family relationships between the Roussillon family and the Forez and Genève families. Dealing firstly with the relationship between the Roussillon/Forez relationship, this is indicated by the documents which are quoted below under this person's possible daughter "M---", wife of Artaud [IV] Seigneur de Roussillon. Assuming for the moment that the relationship was through the wife of Artaud [IV], it is reasonable to suppose that it was through an otherwise unrecorded younger daughter of Guy [III] Comte de Forez, based on the following logic. Firstly, it is not known with certainty whether the Roussillon/Forez connection was through the father or mother of Guillaume de Roussillon (the son of Artaud [IV] and his wife). However, the charter dated Nov 1262, quoted below, suggests that the relationship was through his mother: if Artaud [IV] himself had been the relative of the Forez family, it seems that the Nov 1262 document would have been unnecessary as Artaud could automatically have transferred his rights to his oldest son by testament. Artaud's presence in the document does not necessarily indicate that he held the rights in his own name: they could have been rights held through his wife. If that is correct, presumably "M---" was still alive in Nov 1262. If she had been dead, her rights would already have vested in her children, so her husband's presence in the document would have been unnecessary (unless he was acting in the name of any children who were still minors). Secondly, the order of beneficiaries in the Jun 1270 testament of Renaud Comte de Forez is presumably significant in determining the nature of the connection with the Roussillon family. The document provides for bequests, in order, to "consanguineo meo domino Ano domino d'Oliergue...Guillelmo de Rossilione consanguineo meo". The former is identified as Agnon [VI] Seigneur d'Olliergues, the senior male representative of the descendants of the oldest daughter of Guy [III] Comte de Forez who married Guillaume de Baffie (see the document AUVERGNE for the Baffie and Olliergues families). It is likely therefore that "Guillelmo de Rossilione consanguineo meo" was in some way junior to Agnon [VI] in his rights to the Forez inheritance. The marriage of Artaud [IV] Seigneur de Roussillon is dated to [before 1238], which suggests that his wife is unlikely to have been born much later than [1223]. If that date is correct, the chronology of the Olliergues family suggests that it is improbable that she was an otherwise unrecorded younger sister of Agnon [VI]'s mother. There appear to be two possibilities: either Artaud's wife was the daughter of an otherwise unrecorded younger daughter of Guy [III] Comte de Forez, or she was the granddaughter of a younger sibling of Comte Guy [III]. The former is the most likely possibility: all the other beneficiaries under the Jun 1270 testament of Renaud Comte de Forez were descendants of his grandfather, and it seems unlikely that Comte Renaud would have considered it necessary to provide in his testament for another family representative who was descended from his great-grandfather. In conclusion, until further information comes to light, if the relationship between the Roussillon and Forez families was through Artaud [IV] de Roussillon's wife, it is likely that she was the daughter of an otherwise unrecorded younger daughter of Guy [III] Comte de Forez. Turning to the Roussillon/Genève family connection, this is suggested by an undated charter under which "Amédée de Genève Evesque de Die" (identified as the son of Comte Guillaume [II]) is called "oncle d'Amédée de Roussillon" (who was a younger son of Artaud [IV] Seigneur de Roussillon)[126]. The testament of "Thomas de Sabaudia primogenitus...domini Thomæ de Sabaudia comitis", dated 14 May 1282, which names "consanguineum meum R. patrem dominum Aymarum archiepiscopum Lugdunensem" (the latter identified as another younger son of Artaud [IV] Seigneur de Roussillon) also indicates a connection as the relationship with the Savoie family was presumably through the comtes de Genève[127]. Vachez, in an article dealing with the Roussillon family, approaches a conclusion when he states that Artaud [IV]'s wife was "Marie de Genève, fille de Guillaume Comte de Genève et de Marie ou Alix de la Tour"[128]. However, his explanation is contradictory and confusing. He asserts firstly that the marriage of Artaud [IV] with "Marie" was childless (nullifying completely his explanation for the relationship which is stated in the undated charter) and secondly that Artaud's children were born from a supposed second marriage with "Artaude de Forez, fille de Guy IV comte de Forez", presumably in an attempt to explain the presence of Guillaume de Roussillon in the Jun 1270 testament of Renaud Comte de Forez. The major problem with identifying Guillaume [II] Comte de Genève as the father of "M---" is the number of children attributed to Comte Guillaume and his wife which makes it difficult to explain why "M---" and her descendants should have been singled out in relation to the Forez inheritance. However, this difficulty would be resolved if the daughter of Guy [III] Comte de Forez was the first wife of Comte Guillaume, and the mother of a single daughter, her husband marrying again after she died.]

Individual Note

Béatrice d'Albon, (née en 1161 - morte le 16 décembre 1228 au château de Vizille), dauphine du Viennois, comtesse d'Albon, de Grenoble, d'Oisans et de Briançon de 1162 à 1228, fille de Guigues V d'Albon, dauphin du Viennois, et de Béatrice de Montferrat.

Son père étant mort alors qu'elle n'avait qu'un an, ce fut sa grand-mère Marguerite de Bourgogne qui assura la régence, le temps de lui trouver un époux.

Elle y parvint presque à temps, puisque Béatrice est mariée en 1164 (elle a trois ans !) avec Albéric Taillefer de Toulouse (1157-1183), second fils de Raymond V, comte de Toulouse et de Constance de France. Le jeune époux n'a que sept ans, mais c'est le neveu du roi Louis VII de France. On voit s'amorcer un rapprochement du Dauphiné, terre d'Empire, avec le royaume de France.

Marguerite de Mâcon étant décédée en 1163, c'est sa bru Béatrice de Montferrat, la mère de Béatrice, qui assure la régence à son tour.

Albéric Taillefer meurt sans postérité en 1183, et Béatrice se remarie immédiatement avec un autre vassal du roi de France, Hugues III (1148 † 1192), duc de Bourgogne. Ils auront trois enfants :

André Guigues VI (1184 † 1237), dauphin du Viennois
 Mahaut (1190 † 1242), mariée en 1214 à Jean Ier (1190 † 1267), comte de Chalon et d'Auxonne
 Anne (1192 † 1243), mariée en 1222 à Amédée IV (1197 † 1253), comte de Savoie
 Hugues III prend part à la troisième croisade et meurt à Tyr.

Béatrice épouse alors en 1193 un petit seigneur de Bresse, Hugues Ier (1170 † 1205), seigneur de Coligny. Ils auront deux enfants:

Béatrice, mariée à Albert IV, seigneur de la Tour du Pin. Leur fils Humbert de la Tour du Pin épousera sa cousine Anne, petite fille de Guigues VI, et deviendra dauphin du Viennois ; leur fille Marie, mariée à Raoul (1220 † 1265), comte de Genève 38674052. 105792916 Xxx von Langenstein.

General Notes: The first recorded generation of the Langenstein family consisted of five siblings; Ulrich the knight, the two clergymen Lütold and Werner I. and two sisters Willebirk (Willbirgis) and Adelheid. Ulrich was mentioned in 1191 as the owner of a church in Rot, now in the hamlet of Chlyrot in Untersteckholz. His brothers were both clergymen at that church, Werner I was the head of the canons and Lütold was the priest. Ulrich's wife was Mechtild, the widow of Baron Werner II of Signau, who died in 1178.

Willebirk (mentioned 1197) was married to the Baron and Knight Arnold of Kapfenberg (who was mentioned in 1200). Her sister, Adelheid (mentioned 1197-1239) had Baron Burkhard of Balm (mentioned by 1201) for a husband.

Between 1191-1194 the three Langenstein brothers founded a Cistercian monastery. Diethelm of Krenkingen, Bishop of Constance, confirmed the donation and that it was accepted by the General Chapter of the Order at Citeaux in 1194. The mother monastery, Lützel Abbey, sent twelve monks under the Abbot Konrad to establish an Abbey on the Langenstein lands. However, the first location in the Rot valley proved inadequate and in 1195, the monks moved about 3 km (1.9 mi) down the valley to establish St. Urban's Abbey.

Birth Notes: Source: Geneanet elianparmentier

General Notes: Les débuts des barons d'A. (à distinguer des ministériaux d'A.), qui portaient encore au XIIe s. le nom de leur résidence familiale de Büron (LU), restent obscurs. Des liens, peut-être une parenté, avec les comtes de Frobourg, bâtisseurs probables de la forteresse d'A., expliqueraient le changement de nom. Les premiers représentants de la lignée sont mentionnés en 1130: Chono de Bürren et son fils Liutold; ce dernier est le père de Lüthold (->); un Ulricus clericus nobilis de Arburc sive de Buron est attesté en 1256. La famille posséda du XIIe s. à 1455 la seigneurie de Büron, à laquelle vinrent s'ajouter, au XIIIe s. des fiefs du couvent de Trub dans l'Emmental, au XIVE la seigneurie argovienne de Rued et le bailliage de Grüningen, hypothèque autrichienne. Au XVe s., elle reçut en héritage les seigneuries de Simmenegg, fief d'empire situé dans le Simmental, et de Gutenberg en Haute-Argovie, ainsi que le château de Maienfeld. Thüring (->), dernier représentant de la famille, acheta la seigneurie de Schenkenberg en 1430. Au XIIIe s., les d'A. s'allièrent aux barons de Grünenberg et de Trachselwald, et au XIVE aux comtes de Buchegg, aux barons de Brandis, de Hasenburg et de Werdenberg-Heiligenberg entre autres. La famille assura sa prospérité jusqu'au XVe s. grâce à des règles successorales sévères: on constate à quatre reprises que l'héritage resta entier parce que les fils cadets étaient entrés dans l'Eglise; Rodolphe Ier (->), dans la seconde moitié du XIVE s., puis Thüring en 1424, durent être relevés de leurs vœux, parce que l'héritier principal était mort sans postérité. En 1357, les frères Rodolphe II et Lütold IV, fils de Rodolphe Ier se partagèrent la seigneurie, ce qui ne porta pas à conséquence, parce que la lignée de Lütold s'éteignit. Au service des Habsbourg d'Autriche durant le XIVE s., les d'A. se tournèrent vers Berne dès le début du XVe s., au moment de leur déclin économique.

General Notes: Famille noble, appelée aussi, surtout dans la seconde moitié du XIIIe s., von Schnabelburg, dont la généalogie est assez bien connue et relativement sûre dès 1225. Son château fort ancestral se trouve à Eschenbach (LU), près d'Inwil, d'où ses possessions les plus anciennes s'allongent jusqu'au lac de Zurich, en passant par Rüssegg et Maschwanden; d'autres sont situées en Argovie, à Uri et, dès le XIIe s., par mariage, en Alsace. A défaut de preuve écrite, l'hypothèse que les E. soient une branche des barons de Rotenburg se fonde sur la localisation de leurs premiers alleux et leurs relations avec Lucerne. D'abord vassaux des comtes de Lenzbourg, ils le sont des ducs de Zähringen après 1173. Ils sont alliés aux barons de Schwarzenberg dans le Brisgau, aux Oberhofen dans l'Oberland bernois (dont l'héritière, Ita, épouse vers 1200 Walter II) et apparentés aux barons de Regensberg, Wart, Sulz, Wädenswil-Unspunnen, Tengen et Vaz. Baillis impériaux de Zurich, les E. construisirent, sans doute au XIIIe s., la Schnabelburg, château fort sur l'Albis. En 1185, les frères Konrad (->), abbé de Murbach, Ulrich (->), prévôt de Lucerne, et Walter Ier, seigneur de Schnabelburg, fondèrent le couvent de Kappel, qui abritera les tombeaux de la famille. La thèse traditionnelle, selon laquelle la seigneurie fut divisée vers 1200 déjà entre une branche de l'Oberland bernois et une branche d'Eschenbach et Zurich, les possessions du Brisgau étant administrées en commun, repose sur une vision statique des divisions généalogiques. Jusque dans le dernier quart du XIIIe s., il faut plutôt partir de l'idée d'une grande mobilité géographique des personnes, avec une succession de sièges seigneuriaux. Dans l'Oberland bernois, la puissance des E. reposait sur l'avouerie du couvent d'Interlaken et sur des possessions autour d'Interlaken, au bord des lacs de Thoune et de Brienz, dans les vallées de Grindelwald et Lauterbrunnen. Les E. laissèrent à plusieurs reprises, au XIIIe s., des fils mineurs, ce qui permet de conclure à des mariages tardifs, forme de contrôle des naissances. La seigneurie n'a pas été partagée avant l'époque de Walter III (->), vers 1270. Tandis que les Schnabelburg d'origine, émigrant dans le Brisgau, s'y perpétuaient jusqu'en 1465 sous le nom de Schwarzenberg, les E. transférèrent leur siège à la Schnabelburg. Quelques années plus tard, des difficultés économiques entraînèrent les premières grandes ventes. Le déclin fut rapide. Les biens furent liquidés dans l'Oberland bernois avant 1280, puis ailleurs dès 1290. Berchtold III, fils de Walter III, entra au service des Habsbourg vers 1280. En compensation, il dut obtenir le droit de bâtir le château fort et la bourgade d'Unterseen dans l'Oberland bernois. L'assise économique de la famille s'effondra complètement sous Walter IV (->). La Schnabelburg fut vendue en 1302 aux chevaliers de Saint-Jean de la commanderie de Hohenrain, où Berchtold, frère de Walter, se retira. La seigneurie d'Oberhofen avec Unspunnen et Unterseen fut vendue en 1306 aux Habsbourg. Walter IV perdit le reste de sa fortune pour avoir pris part à l'assassinat de l'empereur Albert Ier (1308), achevant ainsi une chute amorcée bien plus tôt. Il échappa aux représailles sur sa personne et, d'après les chroniqueurs, aurait fini son existence comme berger dans le Wurtemberg. Son frère Mangold, apparemment resté célibataire pour des raisons économiques et sociales, est encore mentionné isolément jusqu'en 1338.

General Notes: Famille noble de l'Oberland bernois, éteinte à la fin du XIIe s., qui tire son nom d'O., centre d'une seigneurie située au bord du lac de Thoune. Les liens généalogiques de la dernière génération n'ont pu être établis que pour Werner (attesté en 1175) et à travers des dépositions de témoins du couvent d'Interlaken (début du XIVe s.). Seilger (->) est désigné dans l'historiographie comme un frère de Werner, de même que Libo, non attesté à son époque, mais revendiqué comme bienfaiteur par le chapitre d'Amsoldingen. Des liens de parenté existaient avec les barons de Thoune. La tradition selon laquelle le territoire d'O. se serait détaché d'une vaste seigneurie de Thoune, en supposant des structures de la propriété stables sur plusieurs siècles, a donné trop d'importance à cette parenté. Une alliance matrimoniale avec une branche des barons d'Eschenbach est toutefois certifiée.

General Notes: Famille de barons des XIe- XIVe s., dont le siège était le château d'Alt-R. au bord du Katzenssee (comm. Regensdorf) érigé vers 1050. Le cœur des possessions des R. se situait dans le Furttal et le Wehntal de part et d'autre de la chaîne de la Lägern. Ils détenaient aussi des biens et des droits dans les vallées de la Limmat et de la Reppisch, dans l'Oberland zurichois et sur la rive droite du lac de Zurich, ainsi que quelques biens épars en Thurgovie et au nord du Rhin et du lac de Constance. L'importance des R. est encore soulignée par leurs alliances matrimoniales avec les maisons comtales des Kibourg, Habsbourg-Laufenbourg, Neuchâtel et Ferrette.

Dalle funéraire du baron Ulrich de Regensberg, située à l'origine au couvent des franciscains de Zurich, fin du XIIIe siècle (Musée national suisse).

Lütold Ier, avoué de l'abbaye de Muri, est le premier R. cité en 1083. La question de son origine reste ouverte. Adolf Nabholz voit en lui un descendant de Landeloh, possessionné dans cette région en 870, alors que Paul Kläui le fait descendre, par Lütold von Affoltern (mentionné en 1044), de Lütold de Montbéliard dont les ancêtres étaient, au Xe s., les comtes alsaciens de Mâcon. On a écarté la thèse selon laquelle les principales possessions des R. auraient fait partie d'une seigneurie qui englobait la quasi-totalité de la région zurichoise, appartenant à un rameau (dit de Winterthour) des Gerolde, passée vers 1030 aux comtes bavarois d'Ebersberg, et qui aurait été partagée entre les descendants de Willbirg, héritière présumée des Ebersberg et épouse de Lütold de Montbéliard.

Les R. sont à l'origine du couvent de femmes de Fahr (au bord de la Limmat) et de l'abbaye de Rüti. Selon un acte daté de 1130, mais rédigé vraisemblablement après 1150, le premier fut fondé par Lütold II, sa femme Judenta et leur fils Lütold III, qui appartenait à l'entourage des Zähringen dans les années 1180. Avec Rüti, les R. cherchèrent vraisemblablement à protéger des biens issus de l'héritage des Alt-Rapperswil, qu'ils s'étaient arrogés en 1192, contre les héritiers de ces derniers, les Toggenbourg et les Neu-Rapperswil. Lütold V fonda, vers 1206, avec les Neu-Rapperswil, une église à Rüti (Seegräben) qu'il intégra bientôt, sous leur pression, à l'abbaye, nettement moins dépendante de lui. Peu après la fondation de la petite ville de Grüningen, qui avait pour objectif de s'assurer d'autres biens contestés dans l'Oberland zurichois, un arrangement fut conclu en 1219 grâce à la médiation de l'archevêque de Salzbourg Eberhard, frère de Lütold V: les barons limitèrent leurs prétentions sur l'avouerie de Rüti et dédommagèrent indirectement la famille lésée des Neu-Rapperswil. Les R. atteignirent leur apogée avec Lütold VI qui s'efforça d'affermir son pouvoir. A cet effet, il s'entoura de ministériaux (les Lägern, Mandach, Steinmaur et Tal) à partir des années 1240 et créa, vers le milieu du siècle, la ville de R. avec le château de Neu.-R., ainsi que Glanzenberg (petite ville avec marché abandonnée ultérieurement).

--- von Regensberg . Nabholz assumed that this person was Lütold [III] who is named above[683]. However, so little definite information is known about the chronology of the early members of the Regensberg family that it is unwise to assert that this is the only possible case. m as her first husband, ---. She married secondly ---. Her two marriages are confirmed by the charter dated 6 May 1219 under which [her son, by her second marriage] "Eberhardus...Salzpurgensis archiepiscopus" confirmed the donation of property in "Rinte" to "fratribus Premonstratensis" made by [her son by her first marriage] "dominus Liutoldus de Regensberch frater noster couterinus (utérin)" by charter dated 6 May 1219[684]. Nabholz suggested that Eberhard Archbishop of Salzburg was the full brother of Lütold [IV], indicating that a source which specifies that he was "von Truchsess" (and therefore a member of the Waldburg family) has been misinterpreted[685]. If his suggestion is correct, the necessity for including "couterinus" in the document is unclear. Examples have been observed of sources in which full brothers have described themselves as "uterine" brothers, but they are unusual. It is more frequent that the term indicates birth from the same mother by different fathers. The accuracy of the "Truchsess" source is a separate question, Nabholz raising reasonable doubts about the family origin of the archbishop's supposed father. One child

General Notes: [Le prénom n'est pas certain]

Famille de barons connue du XIIe au XVe s., possessionnée le long de la Wutach. Les K. possédaient le château du même nom à K. dans le Klettgau. Le premier représentant attesté de la famille est Adilhard, qui apparaît en 1102 comme témoin des Zähringen, dans l'entourage desquels les K. demeurèrent durant tout le XIIe s. C'est vers 1200 que la famille connut son plus grand rayonnement, lorsque lui fut octroyée l'avouerie du couvent de Rheinau, probablement sous l'influence de Diethelm (->), évêque de Constance. La famille se scinda ensuite en deux branches. Jusqu'à son extinction en 1418, la lignée des Alt-K. eut comme sièges les châteaux de Gutenberg et de Tiengen, tandis que les Weissenburg-K. administrèrent leurs biens depuis Weissenburg (bien du couvent de Rheinau) près de Waldshut, jusqu'au moment où, vers 1300, la pression des Habsbourg les contraignit à se retirer à Roggenbach (comm. Bonndorf, Forêt-Noire). En 1482, Elisabeth, abbesse du Fraumünster de Zurich, vendit l'héritage de sa famille, soit la seigneurie de Roggenbach, aux comtes de Lupfen.

Rodolphe II l'Ancien naît en 1168 à Habsburg (Argovie). Il est le fils de Adalbert III de Habsbourg (1138-1199), comte de Zurich, suzerain de Basse-Alsace dit Adalbert le Riche et de Ita de Pfullendorf.

En 1199, il devient landgrave de Haute-Alsace. Frédéric Barberousse, à l'extinction de la famille des comtes d'Egisheim, avait fait don du Landgraviat de Haute-Alsace à son père Adalbert, le premier qui ait joué un grand rôle dans la fondation de la puissante famille des Habsbourg.

Rodolphe est un partisan d'Otton IV dans sa rivalité avec Philippe de Souabe pour la souveraineté du Saint-Empire romain germanique.

Il décède en 1232. Il est inhumé le 10 avril 1232 à Muri (Argovie), en Suisse.

Sa succession est à l'origine de deux lignées : la lignée de Habsbourg, et celle de Laufenbourg. Albert et ses descendants prirent parti pour les Gibelins, Rodolphe et les siens pour les Guelfes.

K. participa à la troisième croisade (1189-1190). L'aide qu'il fournit à Frédéric II pour imposer son pouvoir dans la région du haut Rhin lui valut de recevoir en 1212 des parts encore libres de l'héritage des Lenzbourg (avoueries sur Beromünster et Schänis, bailliage de Glaris). Il hérita en 1218 des biens des Zähringen, soit les alleux situés au sud du Rhin (avec Fribourg, Berthoud et Thoune) et des morceaux de l'avouerie impériale de Zurich, ce qui fit de sa famille l'une des plus importantes de Souabe. Il fonda en 1225 le chapitre de chanoines de Heiligberg, près de Winterthour. Ses enfants contractèrent des unions avec les maisons de Lorraine, de Savoie, de Habsbourg et de Wurtemberg; un de ses fils, Ulrich, devint évêque de Coire.

General Notes: Après la mort de Berthold V, l'héritage des Z. se morcela. L'empereur Frédéric II reprit leurs droits ducaux et la plupart de leurs droits impériaux; il ne concéda plus leur titre ducal ni leur rectorat. Les biens d'Empire reçurent l'immédiateté (Berne, Soleure, le Fraumünster de Zurich) ou furent démembrés (bailliage de Zurich). Les comtes d'Urach et de Kibourg, époux d'Agnes et d'Anna, sœurs de Berthold V, ne purent recueillir qu'une partie des alleux, les premiers au nord du Rhin, les seconds au sud. Cette fragmentation d'un héritage déjà peu structurée favorisa sans doute le mouvement d'autonomie communale des XIIIe et XIVe s.

General Notes:

GUY [III] de Forez, son of GUY [II] Comte de Forez & his wife Guillelme --- (-Acre 28 Nov [1202], bur Acre, Church of St John). Pope Alexander III confirmed an agreement between "Guigoni Forensi comiti...et filium tuum Guigonem" and the archbishop of Lyon concerning the church of Lyon, by bull dated 1 Apr 1173[126]. "Guigo comes Forensis et...Guigo filius eius" donated property to the monastery of Val-Benoît by charter dated 1184[127]. Comte de Forez. "Guigo comes Lugdunensis atque Forensis" donated property to the abbey of Bénissons Dieu, with the consent of "uxor eius...Alix...coram patre meo Guigone comite" by charter dated 1201[128]. La Mure's Histoire des Comtes de Forez reports the death at Acre of Comte Guy "suivant les mémoires du sieur de Laval" and his burial "en l'église...[des] chevaliers de Saint-Jean de Jérusalem", dating the event to after a charter he issued in France dated 1202 and before the election of Baudouin IX Count of Flanders as emperor in 1204, settling for 1202 as the year of his death[129]. The necrology of Saint-Thomas-en-Forez records the death "IV Kal Dec" of "Guigo comes"[130]. "R...Lugdunensis ecclesie archiepiscopus" donated property to Cluny, as instructed by "Guidonis fratris mei comitis Forensis" who had assigned "comitatum Forensis in manu mea nomine tutelae liberorum ipsius, nepotum meorum", to found an anniversary for his brother, with the consent of "patris mei et nepos meus Guigo et sorores eius Guigona et Marquissa et uxor fratris mei Adaladix comitissa", by charter dated Dec 1203[131]. The dating of this charter suggests that 1202 was the correct year of Comte Guy's death, as it is unlikely that news of the event could have reached western Europe from the near East by Dec 1203 if he has died at the end of the previous month. His place of burial is confirmed by the charter dated 1215 under which his brother "Raynaudus...primæ Lugdunensis ecclesie minister" founded an anniversary for "fratris nostri Guigonis comitis Foresii...qui sepultus fuit apud Accon in ecclesia Hospitalis", with the consent of "Guigonis nepotis nostri"[132].

m firstly (repudiated) ASCURAA, daughter of ---. The fact of this first marriage is confirmed by the charter dated Mar [1241/42] under which "Guillermus de Bafes miles" recorded his agreement with "Guiodum de Foreis" which names "comes Guido de Foreis, defunctus, avus meus...ex parte prime uxoris sue legitime, que fuit mater matris mee" and adds that Guy [III] Comte de Forez was also father of "comes Guido de Nevers, pater dicti Guidi" by his second wife married during the lifetime of his first wife[133]. Her name is confirmed by the charter dated 1244 under which her grandson "Guillelmus de Bafia junior" reached agreement with "G. comitem Forensis" concerning his rights to "toto comitatu Forensi" which he held "jure hereditario partim nomine avie mee l'Ascuraa...mater mea unica filia et heres ipsius...filia unica comitis Forensis Guigonis Branda et neptis comitis patri Magni", with the consent of "domino Guillelmo de Bafia patre nostro"[134]. As discussed in more detail below, Boudet misinterprets the source which confirms "S" as the initial letter of the name of Ascuraa's daughter as applying to Ascuraa herself, and suggests that "Ascuraa" was a nickname[135]. A suggestion about her family origin is made by Durand who points out that an article in the charter dated 1244, which records the settlement between the Baffie and Forez families, provides that "le comte Guy V" will help "Guillaume de Baffie" to enter in possession of "la terre de Saint-Bonnet" if "Dauphine fille de Josserand de Saint-Bonnet vient à mourir sans enfants"[136], and concludes that "on est amené à conclure que l'Ascuraa elle-même était une fille de la maison de Saint-Bonnet" through whom Guillaume de Baffie had a legitimate claim to inherit the territory[137].

m secondly ALIX, daughter of --- (-before 21 Aug 1222, bur Bonlieu). "Guigo comes Lugdunensis atque Forensis" donated property to the abbey of Bénissons Dieu, with the consent of "uxor eius...Alix...coram patre meo Guigone comite" by charter dated 1201[138]. According to La Mure, she was "Alix...de Sully" but he cites no primary source which confirms that this is correct[139]. If this family origin is right, from a chronological point of view she must have been the daughter of Gilles [III] Seigneur de Sully who died in [1195]. However, none of the names associated with the Sully family are found among her descendants and, until further information comes to light, there seems to be an insufficient factual basis to show the connection by hyperlink, even in square brackets. Another indication of her family origin is provided by the charter dated Oct 1220 under which "Rainaudus et Hulricus, fratres, filii quondam vicecomitis Matisconensis" granted property "quicquid habebant ultra Ligerim...Croset" to "Guigoni comiti Forisiensi nepoti nostro"[140]. The precise family relationship between the comtes de Forez and vicomtes de Mâcon has not been traced, but it may have been through the mother of the donee under this charter, Guy [IV] Comte de Forez. "Patris mei et nepos meus Guigo et sorores eius Guigona et Marquissa et uxor fratris mei Adaladix comitissa" consented to the charter dated Dec 1203 under which "R...Lugdunensis ecclesiæ archiepiscopus" donated property to Cluny, as instructed by "Guidonis fratris mei comitis Forensis" who had assigned "comitatum Forenses in manu mea nomine tutelæ liberorum ipsius, nepotum meorum", to found an anniversary for his brother[141]. Her date of death is set by the charter dated 21 Aug 1222 under which "Comes Forensis Guigo" donated property to the abbey of Bénissons Dieu, for the soul of "Alasiæ matris meæ bonæ memoriæ"[142]. Her place of burial is confirmed by the charter dated Jun 1225 under which "Guigo comes Forensis" donated property to the abbey of Bénissons Dieu, for the burial of "matris nostræ"[143].

Individual Note

Guigues V [ou VII voir ci-dessous] d'Albon né vers 1125, mort le 29 juillet 1162 à Vizille, fut un comte d'Albon de 1142 à 1162. Au cours de son règne, il prit le titre de dauphin du Viennois et fut en conséquence le 1er Dauphin de Viennois.

Il était fils de Guigues IV d'Albon, dit Dauphin, et de Marguerite de Mâcon.

À la mort de son père, Guigues V est trop jeune pour gouverner, c'est pourquoi sa mère Marguerite assure la régence jusqu'en 1153. À peine en âge de porter les armes, Guigues décide de venger son père en allant ravager les terres du comte de Savoie. Comme onze ans plus tôt, il met le siège devant Montmélan mais est mis en déroute par l'armée de secours du comte Humbert III de Savoie. L'évêque de Grenoble, Hugues II, intervient et une paix honorable pour les deux adversaires est conclue. Le 13 janvier 1155, Guigues reconnaît à Rivoli près de Turin la suzeraineté de l'empereur germanique Frédéric Barberousse qui en échange lui confirme la possession des terres que les précédents comtes d'Albon avaient acquises de manière litigieuse. Il lui accorde en outre une mine d'argent à Râme dans l'Embrunais et le droit de battre monnaie à Cézanne.

GUIGUES [VII] (-Château de Vizille 29 Jul 1162, bur Notre Dame de Grenoble). He succeeded his father as Comte d'Albon, and was also referred to as "Dauphin". "La reine Mathilde" donated property to the abbey of Chalais in 1146, confirmed by charter dated 1147 by "Humbert alors évêque du Puy, depuis archévêque de Vienne...le comte Guigues, fils de Guigues dauphin et sa mere"[269]. Berthold Herzog von Zähringen (imperial administrator of the kingdom of Burgundy) granted rights in Vienne, which Emperor Lothar II had granted to his predecessor Duke Konrad, to "Guigoni Dalphino Albonis comiti" by charter dated 1155[270]. "Dom. comes Albionensis, Guigo...dalphinus", acting with his council of advisers "Arberti de Turre..." and with the advice of "Willelmi de Clariaco Romanensis ecclesie sacristie", gave permission to the inhabitants of Romans to build a wall around their town, by charter dated 1161[271]. The Aymari Rivalli De Allobrogibus records the death in 1162 "in castro suo Visiliæ prope Gratianopolim" of "Guigo tertius" and his burial next to his father[272]. m ([1155]) BEATRIX, daughter of --- (- bur Notre-Dame de Grenoble). The wife of Guigues [VII] is named Beatrix in secondary sources but the primary source which confirms that this is correct has not yet been identified. Her origin has been the subject of considerable controversy. The Vita Margaritæ Albonensis comitissæ records that the son of Marguerite de Viennois married "Imperatore...consanguineam"[273]. The Aymari Rivalli De Allobrogibus records that "Guigo tertius" married "neptem...primi Federici imperatoris"[274]. Chorier's Histoire de Dauphiné names her Beatrice di Monferrato, daughter of Guglielmo V Marchese di Monferrato & his wife Judith of Austria, stating that her parentage is confirmed by letters from Emperor Friedrich I, dated 1168, addressed to "Guigoni Dalphino" which refer to her as "filia Guillelmi comitis Montisferrati"[275]. This document has not been found in a search of the MGH compilation of diplomas of Emperor Friedrich. Usseglio suggests that Chorier's hypothesis is based on a misinterpretation of a charter of Emperor Friedrich II, dated Mar 1238, which is addressed to "Beatricis filiæ quondam Guillelmi Marchionis Montisferrati" (who was the daughter of Guglielmo VI Marchese di Monferrato, and widow of Dauphin André), and confirms privileges granted to Dauphin Guigues [VII] in 1155[276]. The family connections of Emperor Friedrich I are so numerous that it does not seem worthwhile to speculate on Beatrix's correct parentage. According to Europäische Stammtafeln[277], Beatrice married secondly Enrico Marchese di Caretto. However, the only primary source which suggests this second marriage appears to be the late 13th/14th century Vida of the poet Raimbaut de Vaqueiras which describes her as sister of Bonifazio Marchese di Monferrato and states that she married "Enric del Caret"[278]. However, Raimbaut de Vaqueiras himself calls her "filha del marques" in the famous 'Carros', 'Truan, mala guerra', composed in [1200/01], which emphasises her youth[279], which seems to suggest that the Beatrice in question must have been the daughter not sister of Marchese Bonifazio. A marriage with Dauphin Guigues would therefore be chronologically impossible. Guigues [VII] & his wife had two children

General Notes: vers 1125, décédé en 1186, inhumé dans l'abbaye de Saint-Pierre dans la Forêt-Noire. Fils du duc Conrad. Petit-fils de Berthold II (->). Epouse Heilwig de Frobourg. En 1152, Z. se fit confirmer par l'empereur Frédéric Ier le rectorat de Bourgogne, soit le droit d'exercer la puissance de l'empereur, en son absence, en Haute-Bourgogne (transjurane) et en Basse-Bourgogne (royaume d'Arles). Il apparaît fréquemment dans les documents comme dux et rector Burgundiae. Mais il se vit fortement limité dans sa liberté d'action par la politique des Hohenstaufen, d'abord dans le sud-ouest après le mariage de Frédéric Ier avec Béatrice de Bourgogne (1156), puis dans les Alpes. Il obtint pourtant le droit d'investiture et l'avouerie des évêchés de Genève, Lausanne et Sion; il put consolider la domination zähringienne sur le Plateau suisse en fondant les villes de Fribourg (1157) et plus tard Berne. A l'extinction des Lenzbourg (1173), il recueillit le bailliage impérial de Zurich. Il accompagna trois fois Frédéric Ier en Italie.

Notes

Individual Note

Guigues IV d'Albon, dit Dauphin mort à La Buissière en 1142, fut comte d'Albon de 1133 à 1142.

Il était fils de Guigues III d'Albon et de Mathilde

Ce comte est le premier à porter le surnom de Dauphin (Guigo Delphinus), et ceci dès 1110, soit vingt trois ans avant de régner. Les fiefs du comte d'Albon et du comte de Savoie s'enchevêtraient et aucune frontière ne pouvait être tracée. Certains fiefs du comte de Savoie Amédée III comme Rives, Voiron et Saint-Laurent-du-Pont étaient trop près de Grenoble pour ne pas être jugés sensibles par Guigues. Il suffit qu'Amédée exerce quelques pressions sur les terres dauphinoises limitrophes en 1140 pour que le comte d'Albon lève son ost et marche contre le comte de Savoie en Grésivaudan, même si ce dernier était le beau-frère de Guigues, car il avait épousé sa sœur Mahaud. Il met le siège devant le château de Montmélian mais est surpris par une contre-attaque du comte de Savoie. Mortellement blessé, il est transporté au château de La Buissière où il meurt 3 jours plus tard dans les bras de son épouse.

Il avait épousé Marguerite, fille d'Étienne, comte Palatin de Bourgogne, nièce du pape Calixte II, et il avait eu trois enfants:

Guigues V d'Albon (1125 † 1162), comte d'Albon, qui utilisant le surnom de son père prendra le titre de dauphin du Viennois

Béatrice d'Albon, mariée à Aymar Ier de Poitiers, comte de Valentinois

Marquise d'Albon († 1196), mariée vers 1150 à Guillaume VII d'Auvergne († 1169), comte d'Auvergne, et dont les descendants prendront le titre de dauphin d'Auvergne

GUILLAUME [VI] (-25 Jan [1136]). "Rotberti comitis Alvernorum, Wilelmi filii eius" subscribed a charter of "Francorum rex Philippus" dated 1095[217]. Comte d'Auvergne et de Velay. The necrology of the priory of Saint-Robert de Cornillon, Grenoble records the death "VIII Kal Feb" of "Guillelmus comes Arverniæ"[218]. m ---. The name of Guillaume's wife is not known. It is possible that she was Emma of Sicily, daughter of daughter of Roger I Count of Sicily & his first wife Judith d'Evreux [Normandie]. Malaterra names "filiam eius...Emmam...de prima uxore Judicta" when recording that her father arranged her marriage to Philippe I King of France, in return for a generous dowry, not knowing that the king was still married to Bertha of Holland. She left for France, but when the king's marital status came to light, the dowry was sent back to Sicily and her marriage to the Comte de Clermont was arranged by her brother-in-law Raymond de Saint-Gilles[219]. Baluze is extremely sceptical about the reliability of these statements and suggests that the "comte de Clermont" in question may have been a member of the Clermont [Chiaromonte] family which is recorded from the early 12th century in southern Italy[220]. According to Europäische Stammtafeln[221], the wife of Comte Guillaume [VI] was Emma, daughter of Guillaume d'Evreux, who was the maternal aunt of Emma of Sicily, but this appears to be chronologically impossible. Emma married [secondly] Rodolfo Macabeo Conte di Montescaglioso. Pope Pascal II confirmed the possessions of the abbey of Notre-Dame de Josaphat in Sicily and Calabria by charter dated 3 Jan 1113, listing the donations including "Emme filie Rogerii comitis Sicilie et Calabrie...orto ante ecclesiam Sancte Perpetue"[222]. "Rogerius...Sicilie et Italie rex" confirmed donations "a beate memorie Emma sorore nostra quondam comitissa civitate Severiane et Appii domina" to the church of St Basilus in Appia by charter dated 21 Sep 1133[223]. "Rogerius...Sicilie et Italie rex...Rogerii primi comitis heres et filius" confirmed past donations to St Mary Josephat, Jerusalem by (among others) "dna Emma soror nostra uxor quondam Radulfi Machabei" by charter dated 11 Oct 1144[224]. "Guillelmus comes Nivernensis, qui fuit natus de filia Lancelini de Baugenciaco" renounced practices which prejudiced the abbey of Saint-Michel, with the approval of "Adalaidis comitissa uxor ipsius...et filii ipsorum Rainaldus et Robertus...Guillelmus filius supradicti comitis", by charter dated 1134, witnessed by "Oliverius de Nouariis, Gaufrerus frater eius, Adam de Nouariis...Hervaudus de Tociaco, Odo frater eius...Joffredus de Tornodoro, Renaudus frater eius..."[128]. "Willelmus comes Nivernensis...et filii mei Willelmus et Rainaldus" approved the sale of property by "Hugo de Petraperusia...Helisabeth uxor mea et Rainaldus frater meus" to the priory of Saint-Etienne by charter dated 1143 [129]. A charter dated Feb 1223 recalls a donation to La Charité-sur-Loire by "domini Guillelmi comitis Nivernensis...cum duobus filiis meis Vuillelmo et Rainaldo" dated 1143[130]. "Bernardus Clarevallis...abbas" gave judgment in disputes between Hugues Bishop of Auxerre and "Willelmum comitem Nivernensem" by charter dated 1145[131]. He abdicated as Comte in favour of his son in 1146 and retired to La Grande Chartreuse in 1147[132]. Comte de Champagne (Thibaud II, 1125-1152), Comte de Brie and de Blois (1102-1152), Comte de Troyes (Thibaut II, 1125-1152), Comte de Châteaudun (1102-1151), Comte de Meaux (Thibaud II, 1102-1151), Comte de Chartres (1102-1151)

THIBAUT de Blois, son of ETIENNE Comte de Blois & his wife Adela of England ([1090/95]-10 Jan 1152, bur Lagny). Orderic Vitalis records that "Stephanus Blesensis palatinus comes" and his wife had "filios quatuor: Guillelmum et Tedbaldum, Stephanumque et Henricum", adding that Thibaut was "hæres hæreditatis paternæ"[242]. "Henricus comes cognomina Stephanus necnon et Adela uxor eius cum filiis nostris" granted immunities to Chartres Notre-Dame by charter dated [Oct 1100/1101], signed by "Stephani comitis, Adele comitisse, Guillelmi, Stephani, Odonis, Teobaldi"[243], which suggests that Thibaut may have been the fourth son although this is inconsistent with his having succeeded his father. It does not appear from other sources that Thibaut was younger than his brother Etienne. Orderic

Vitalis provides some indication of his birth year when he records that his mother Ctss Adela provided troops to Louis VI King of France at the time of the siege of Montmorency in [1108] "because Count Stephen her husband had gone on crusade and her eldest sons, William and Theobald, who were not yet of age, were unable to command troops of knights"[244]. The description is confused because Count Etienne had died several years earlier, but it nevertheless provides some indication of the comparative youth of the brothers Guillaume and Thibaut at the time. This is corroborated by the charter dated 2 Apr 1104 under which "Hugo comes Campanie Teotbaldi comitis filius" donated property to the abbey of Molesme which names "...comitissam Adelaidem uxorem fratris mei comitis Stephani nepotes..." and is subscribed by "Teotbaldus puer filius Stephani comitis nepos huius comitis Hugonis"[245]. He succeeded his father in 1102 as THIBAUT IV "le Grand/le Vieil" Comte de Blois, de Troyes. He was invested with the county of Chartres in 1107. Chibnall speculates that the delay in this investiture may have been due to lack of proof that his father was dead rather than Thibaut's own youth[246], but Thibaut's age is the obvious reason. Orderic Vitalis states that Comte Thibaut supported Hugues du Puiset during his rebellion against Louis VI King of France in 1111, which led to more widespread warfare culminating in Thibaut defeating the king's forces near Meaux later in 1111[247]. Henry of Huntingdon records that Thibaut rebelled against King Louis in 1116, aided by his uncle Henry I King of England[248]. It is assumed that these two reports refer to the same rebellion, with contradictory dating. The Chronicle of Alberic de Trois-Fontaines records that "Hugo comes Campanie" became a Knight Templar in 1125 and was succeeded by "Theobaldus nepos eius"[249]. Orderic Vitalis states that Thibaut was proposed as successor to Henry I King of England by Normans at a meeting at Neubourg in Dec 1135, but when they heard that his younger brother had forestalled him, they agreed to serve King Stephen[250]. Orderic Vitalis also records that he was offered the crown of England in 1141 after his brother Stephen was captured at Lincoln, but declined the offer[251]. He entered into conflict with Raoul Comte de Vermandois in 1142-43. Louis VII King of France declared war against him, laid siege to and captured Vitry but signed peace at Vitry in 1143. The Chronicle of Alberic de Trois-Fontaines records the death "1152 VI Id Jan" of "comes Campanie Theobaldus" and his burial "apud Latinicacum"[252]. A list of foundations at Troyes records the memory "10 Jan" of "Thibault Comte de Champagne décédé ce jour"[253]. The necrology of Saint-Etienne, Troyes records the death "10 Jan" of "Theobaldus comes Campanie"[254]. The necrology of Saint-Loup, Troyes records the death "10 Jan 1152" of "Teobaudus comes" and his burial "in ecclesia de Lagny"[255]. The necrology of Chartres cathedral records the death "IV Id Jan" of "Teobaldus comes palatinus", stating that "cuius filius Teobaldus comes Blesensis et Francie senescallus...matris sui Matildis" donated property for his soul[256].

m ([1125]) MATHILDE von Sponheim, daughter of ENGELBERT Marchese of Istria [later Duke of Carinthia] [Sponheim] & his wife Uta von Passau [Ratpotonen] (-[13 Dec] [1160/1161]). She is named by Orderic Vitalis, who calls her father "Duke Engelbert", when recording her marriage[257]. The Chronicle of Alberic de Trois-Fontaines records in 1125 that "domnus Norbertus Premonstratensis ordinis institutor" was sent by "comite Campanie Theobaldo" to Germany to negotiate his marriage with "filiam...Ingelberti...marchionis Foroiuliensis", adding that "fratres eiusdem Ingelberti erant episcopus Ratisbonensis et archiepiscopus Coloniensis Fredericus"[258]. The same source names "comitissa Mathildis Campaniensis et uxor Renaldi comitis Nivernensis et comitissa Montis Veteris iuxta Coloniā et mater illorum Romanorum qui Froiepain dicuntur" as sisters of "archiepiscopi Coloniensis Frederici"[259]. In the case of the two sisters named first (of which the wife of Thibaut IV Comte de Blois was the older), other sources confirm that they were daughters of Engelbert Marchese of Istria [Duke of Carinthia]. Ascertaining the precise family relationship between all four presumed sisters and Friedrich [I] Archbishop of Köln depends on interpreting apparently contradictory sources which link the archbishop with the Sponheim and Schwarzenberg/Regensberg families, a problem which is discussed in detail in the document KÖLN ARCHBISHOPRIC. "Teobaudus Blesensis comes" made a donation to Montiérender by charter dated 1139 with the consent of "Matildis comitissa uxor mee et Henricus filius meus"[260]. "Comitissa Mathildis et filius eius Henricus et Teobaudus et Stephanus" donated property to the abbey of Fontevraud by charter dated to [1125/49][261]. A list of foundations at Troyes records the memory "13 Dec" of "Mathilde épouse du comte Thibaut"[262]. The necrology of Saint-Etienne, Troyes records the death "13 Dec" of "Mathildis comitissa"[263]. The necrology of Chartres cathedral records the death "Id Dec" of "comitissa Mathildis mater...archiepiscopi Senonensis Willelmi et...Henrici comitis, Teobaldi comitis atque comitis Stephani"[264].

[6] ETIENNE [I] "Tête-Hardi" de Bourgogne (-murdered Ascalon 27 May 1102). He and his brothers Raimond and Hugues called themselves sons of the "most noble count William" in a late-11th century document[71]. He succeeded in [1087] as Comte de Mâcon, Seigneur de Varasque. Albert of Aix records that "Reinoldo duce Burgundiæ, fratre Stephani, vice ipsius Burgundiam regentis" left for Jerusalem, indicating that his brother Etienne was appointed regent in the county of Burgundy in his place[72]. Etienne joined the Crusade some time after the death of his brother. Albert of Aix records that "Stephanus...dux Burgundiæ..." joined the Lombard contingent on the second wave of the First Crusade, dated to late 1100 from the context[73]. He commanded troops with Etienne Comte de Blois which were defeated by the Turks at Marsivam. William of Tyre records the presence at the second capture of Tortosa in 1102 of "Stephanus comes Burgundiæ"[74]. Albert of Aix records that "Conradus, Arpinus, Stephanus Blesensis itemque Stephanus de Burgundia" were captured at Ramla after being burned in a tower, and that "Stephano itemque Stephano" were beheaded, dated to mid-1102 from the context[75]. m ([1090]) BEATRIX de Lorraine, daughter of GERARD IV Duke of Upper Lotharingia [Lorraine] & his wife Hadwide --- (-[1116/17]). GUIGUES [IV] "Pinguis", son of GUIGUES [d'Albon] & his wife first wife Adelsindis --- ([1025/30]-19 Jan [1106], bur Priory of Saint-Robert). A charter dated to [1100] relates details of a dispute between the bishop and counts of Albon which names "Guigo Vetus, pater Guigonis Crassus...Guigoni comiti, filio Guigonis Crassis"[208]. "Malleni episcopi Gratianopolitani et Wigonis comitis et uxoris eius Adelsendis, filiorumque suorum Umberti et Wigonis" signed a charter dated 26 Aug 1035 relating to the donation of four churches in Vico to the abbey of Saint-Chaffre[209]. A charter dated 29 Apr 1050 records the donation by "Guigoni...maiori, qui postea effectus est monachus...et Adelai comitissæ, et alii Guigoni, filio illius Guigonis...et uxori eius Petronillæ" to Saint-Pierre de Vienne[210]. "...Guigo comes et filius eius Guigo..." witnessed the charter dated 27 Jan 1052 which records an agreement between the archbishop of Vienne and the canons of the church of Romans[211]. "Guigo comes qui nomine vocor senex atque filius meus Guigo pinguis" donated property to Oulx by charter dated 1063[212]. Comte d'Albon. "Wigo Albionis comes" named "fratres mei Guigonis cognomento Raimundi, Richardi, Armannique" in his donation to Cluny dated 1079[213]. "Vuigo comes" donated property "in parrochia Heroneii" to Domène by undated charter[214]. "Wigo...comes" confirmed a donation to Cluny by charter dated [1100][215]. "Guigonis comitis, filii Guigonis Veteris..." subscribed the charter dated 22 Jan 1105 relating to a donation to the cathedral of Grenoble[216]. Chorier's Histoire de Dauphiné states that an epitaph in the priory of Saint-Robert records the death 19 Jan of "Guigo Grassus Dalphinus primus et monachus" but comments that it was erected long after his death[217].

m (before 29 Apr 1050) PETRONILLE, daughter of --- ([1039/41]-9 Sep, before 1106, bur Priory of Domene). A charter dated 29 Apr 1050 records the donation by "Guigoni...maiori, qui postea effectus est monachus...et Adelai comitissæ, et alii Guigoni, filio illius Guigonis...et uxori eius Petronillæ" to Saint-Pierre de Vienne[218]. [According to Europäische Stammtafeln[219], the first wife of Guigues [IV] was Adelaide de Savoie, daughter of Oddon Comte de Chablais, Marchese di Susa & his wife Adelaida Marchesa di Susa ([1052/53]-[Schloß Twiel] early 1079, bur St Blasius). Another table in Europäische Stammtafeln[220] shows the first wife of Guigues Comte d'Albon as "Adelais (von Turin)" and their son Guigues [V] Comte d'Albon as co-heir of Adelaida Marchesa di Susa in 1091. The basis for this hypothesis has not been found, but it is unlikely to be correct considering Adelaide's estimated birth date. On the other hand, it is likely that the wife of Guigues [IV] was a descendant of Adelaida Marchesa di Susa, assuming that it is correct that his son Guigues [V] was one of her co-heirs in 1091. If that is correct, it is possible that his wife was the daughter of Adelaida's second marriage to Enrico di Monferrato, and therefore born in [1039/41]. If Guigues

[IV]'s wife was Petronille named in the charter quoted above, she would have still been a child at the time of that marriage.] The necrology of the priory of Saint-Robert records the death "V Id Sep" of "la comtesse Pétronille, épouse de Guigues le Gras et mère de Guigues le comte"[221]. Her burial place is confirmed by the charter dated 1106 under which "dominus Vuigo comes et uxor eius Regina quæ fuit de Anglia" confirmed a donation to Domène which states that "matris suæ" was buried in the monastery[222].

GUILLAUME de Bourgogne, son of RENAUD I Comte de Bourgogne & his [first] wife Adelais de Normandie ([1024]-12 Nov 1087, bur Besançon). Guillaume of Jumièges names "Adeliz" as the first daughter of "dux Richardus" and his wife "Goiffredum Britannorum comitem...sororem...Judith", adding that she married "Rainaldo Burgundionum comiti" by whom she had "Willelmum et Widonem" (the marriage is recorded in a later passage)[33]. His parentage is also given by Orderic Vitalis[34]. He succeeded his father in 1057 as GUILLAUME I "le Grand" Comte de Bourgogne. Orderic Vitalis records that for about ten years he fought his brother Guy ex-Comte de Brionne who attempted to dispossess Guillaume[35]. He was one of the princes called upon by Pope Gregory VII in 1074 to help defend St Peter's[36]. He succeeded in 1078 as Comte de Mâcon, when his cousin Guy [II] Comte de Mâcon entered holy orders. The necrology of Besançon Cathedral records the death "II Id Nov" of "Willelmus comes Burgundionum pater Hugonis Archiepiscopi"[37].

m ([1049/57]) ETIENNETTE, daughter of --- (-after 19 Oct 1088). Szabolcs de Vajay[38] demonstrates that his earlier hypothesis concerning a Lotharingian origin of Etiennette is incorrect[39]. According to Père Anselme, she was the daughter of Berenguer Ramón I "el Curvo" Conde de Barcelona[40], but there appears to be no contemporary documentation on which this is based. Settiani suggests that Etiennette may have been the daughter of Bernard [II] Comte de Bigorre & his first wife Clémence, based solely on onomastics[41], but the possible motivation for a marriage between these two families is not obvious. Some secondary sources suggest that she was "Etiennette de Vienne"[42]. However, no documentary evidence has been found which indicates a connection between her descendants and the county of Vienne before her grandson Guillaume (who died 1155, see below), which suggests that any rights to the county were acquired by the family well after Etiennette died. Szabolcs de Vajay attributes the error connecting Etiennette with Vienne to her epitaph, which names "Allobrogum comitissa...Stephania"[43], indicating that, while the Allobroges had been a Gallic tribe living around Vienne, this archaic term was used elsewhere simply to describe the county of Burgundy[44].

Il était fils d'un Guigues d'Albon et d'une Gotelène de Clérieux. Dès 1016, il se fait appeler comte dans une charte concernant des biens qu'il possède à Moirans. Époux d'Adélaïde de Savoie. Meurt le 22 avril 1070

GUIGUES [III] "Vetus/Vieux", son of GUIGUES [II] & his wife [Gotelene ---] ([995/1000]-Cluny 22 Apr [1074/75]). "Rodolfus rex" jointly with "Agiltrude regina coniuge nostra nec non archiepiscopo Burchardo fratre nostro et comitibus Rodulpho et Uberto" gave the castle of Moras to "Umberto episcopo eiusque matri domine Freburgie et nepotibus eius, Wigonis bone memorie filiis, Umberto Wigoni Willelmo" by charter dated 6 Jun 1009[177]. His birth date range, estimated consistent with the birth date ranges which are estimated for the other members of this family, means that Guigues was probably still a child at the date of this charter. "...Wigonis et Umberti filiorum fratris eius..." signed the charter dated 1012 under which "Umbertus Gratianopolensis ecclesiæ præsul" donated property to the abbey of Saint-Chaffre[178]. Comte d'Albon. "Wigo comes filius Gotelenne" donated "ecclesiam de Visilia" to Cluny by undated charter, subscribed by "Wigonis filii sui, Ainardi de Domena, duobus de fratribus suis Attanulfi Wigonis, Bermundi de Aurel, Humberti nepotis sui"[179]. This charter is dated to [1090] in the compilation of Cluny charters. The document refers to Hugues abbot of Cluny, who is named in documents between 1048 and 1090. If [1090] is the correct date, it would have been signed towards the end of the lives of all three of the Domène brothers who subscribed the document: they are named in charters for Domène between [1027] and [1085][180]. It is therefore possible that the document dates from earlier in the abbacy of Hugues, in which case the donor could be Guigues [III] "Vetus". If this was correct, it would also resolve the problem of the identity of Gotelene. Chorier's Histoire de Dauphiné suggests that "Gotelenne" was a corruption derived from the word "Catalonia" and therefore that this charter refers to Guigues [III]'s son by Ines de Barcelona[181]. This seems an unlikely explanation as the name "Catalonia" has not been observed in contemporary charters to describe Barcelona and adjacent counties collectively (see the document CATALONIA). A charter dated 29 Apr 1050 records the donation by "Guigoni...maiori, qui postea effectus est monachus...et Adelai comitissæ, et alii Guigoni, filio illius Guigonis...et uxori eius Petronillæ" to Saint-Pierre de Vienne[182]. "...Guigo comes et filius eius Guigo..." witnessed the charter dated 27 Jan 1052 which records an agreement between the archbishop of Vienne and the canons of the church of Romans[183]. "Vuigo comes" donated property "in parrochia Heroneii" to Domène by undated charter which names "dominus Hugo Prior de Domina" (whose priorship is dated to [1058] to [1072], indicating that the donor was Guigues [III] "Vetus")[184]. "Guigo comes qui nomine vocor senex atque filius meus Guigo pinguis" donated property to Oulx by charter dated 1063[185]. "Wigo" (signed "Wigonis comitis") granted "sponse mee...Agnetis" various properties "in dotalitio", including "castellum Albionem...Moratum...et Vallem...in comitatu Viennensis" by charter dated "VI Id Mai, luna XXma VIa regnante Henrico rege", subscribed by "Pontii episcopi"[186], the date corresponding to the year 1070. He became a monk at Cluny. The necrology of the Priory of Saint-Martin-des-Champs records the death "X Kal Mai" of "Wigo comes"[187]. The necrology of the priory of Saint-Robert records the death "X Kal Mai" of "Guigo comes qui cognominatus est Vetus"[188]. No document has yet been found which identifies the year of his death. However, considering the date of his second marriage, and the birth of his son by his second wife, it is likely that he died in [1074/75]. He was dead by 12 Nov 1076, the date of the testament of his father-in-law Ramon Berenguer Comte de Barcelona which provides for the reversion of the testator's county to "filium Guigonis de Albion quem habuit de filia sua Agnes" in case of extinction of his descendants in the male line[189]. This wording implies that both Ines and Guigues were deceased at the time. Prudhomme distinguishes two individuals in place of "Guigues [III]"[190]. He states that the older Guigues died in 1034, married "Gotelenne", and that his son was the second person, Guigues "Vetus". He cites no primary source in support of his theory, in particular no document which indicates that one of the counts Guigues died in 1034. The division of this person into two seems unnecessary to explain the primary sources. The family relationships shown in this document leave no primary source reference unexplained. In any case, it seems appropriate that Guigues "Vetus" should be identified with Guigues [III] as he would have well merited his nickname, assuming that his birth date is correctly estimated as shown above.

m firstly ADELSINDIS, daughter of --- (-after 29 Apr 1050). "Malleni episcopi Gratianopolitani et Wigonis comitis et uxoris eius Adelsendis, filiorumque suorum Umberti et Wigonis" signed a charter dated 26 Aug 1035 relating to the donation of four churches in Vico to the abbey of Saint-Chaffre[191]. According to Europäische Stammtafeln[192], the first wife of Guigues [III] was "Gotelana de Clérieux". It appears that this hypothesis must be based on the charter dated [1090] under which "Wigo comes filius Gotelenne" donated property to Cluny[193]. However, as noted above, a better interpretation of the documentation is that "Gotelenne" was the mother of Guigues [III] not his wife. A charter dated 29 Apr 1050 records the donation by "Guigoni...maiori, qui postea effectus est monachus...et Adelai comitissæ, et alii Guigoni, filio illius Guigonis...et uxori eius Petronillæ" to Saint-Pierre de Vienne[194].

m secondly (10 May 1070) INES de Barcelona, daughter of RAMON BERENGUER I "el Viejo" Comte de Barcelona & his third wife Almodis de la Marche ([1055/56]-[before 12 Nov 1076]). "Wigo" (signed "Wigonis comitis") granted "sponse mee...Agnetis" various properties "in dotalitio", including "castellum Albionem...Moratum...et Vallem...in comitatu Viennensis" by charter dated "VI Id Mai, luna XXma VIa regnante Henrico rege", subscribed by "Pontii episcopi"[195], the date corresponding to the year 1070. Her parentage is confirmed by the publication of the testament of "comitis Barchinone...Raimundi Berengarii" dated 12 Nov 1076 includes a residuary provision that, in case of the death of his three other children, his counties would revert to "filium Guigonis de Albion quem habuit de filia sua Agnes"[196]. The wording of the testament implies that both Ines and her husband were deceased at the time.

General Notes: ADELAIDE de Savoie, daughter of ODDON Comte de Chablais, Marchese di Susa & his wife Adelaida Marchesa di Susa ([1052/53]-[Schloß Twiel] early 1079, bur St Blasius). The Annales of Berthold, which record the death in 1079 of "uxor...regis Roudolfi...Adelheit, filia Adelheidæ marchionissæ, soror Berhtæ reginæ uxoris Heinrici", prove that she was the daughter of Adelaida di Susa[478]. Her daughter Adelheid is named with "progenitoribus Rodolfo...rege et Adelheida...regina matertera Heinrici quarti inperatoris" in a charter dated [1079/10 Oct 1086][479]. Europäische Stammtafeln[480] shows Adelaide's birth date as "after 1052", presumably based on the likelihood that she was born after her sister Berthe as Heinrich IV King of Germany would no doubt have married the older daughter. Concerning her marriage date, it is likely that the marriage took place after the marriage of her older sister. She is named "Adalheid coniux Ruodulfi ducis" in the Annales Weissemburgenses, which records that she was accused of being unchaste, was repudiated by her husband two years later, but that Pope Alexander arranged a reconciliation, dated to [1069/71][481]. A continuation of the Annales of St Gallen records that "uxor Rudolphi ducis" was accused of adultery with "Werinhario commite [presumably Werner Graf von Habsburg] suo cognato"[482]. The Annales of Berthold record that "rex...Roudolfus...uxor" was "in partes Burgundiæ a Turego divertens", suffering "iniurias" in "quodam castello suo"[483]. The wife of "Rudolfus rex de Arle" is named "Adelheidis" in a list of founders of the monastery of St Peter in Schwarzwald[484]. The Annales Sancti Blasii record the death in 1079 of "Adelheit uxor Roudolfi regis" and her burial "apud Sanctum Blasium"[485]. The Annales of Berthold record the death in 1079 of "uxor...regis Roudolfi...Adelheit, filia Adelheidæ marchionissæ, soror Berhtæ reginæ uxoris Heinrici" and her burial "ad monasterium Sancti Blasii"[486]. According to Europäische Stammtafeln[487], Adelaide married firstly Guigues Comte d'Albon. Another table in Europäische Stammtafeln[488] shows the first wife of Guigues Comte d'Albon as "Adelais (von Turin)" and their son Guigues II Comte d'Albon as co-heir of Adelaida Marchese di Susa in 1091. The basis for this alleged first marriage has not been found but it is unlikely to be correct considering Adelaide's likely birth date.

General Notes: GUIGUES [I], son of --- (-[7 Sep/18 Oct] 996). "Barnuinus et uxor mea...Teutberge" donated property "in villa Vitrosco" to Saint-André de Bas, Vienne, for the souls of "senioris nostri domini Vigoni domneque Fredeburge", by charter dated "regnante domno Rodulfo rege" (dated to [1012/23] in the compilation, but presumably better dated to [993/96])[145]. "Wigo et uxor mea Fredeburga" donated property "in comitatu Viennensi in agro Cassiacensi in villa...Vernio" by charter dated Sep [996], subscribed by "Umberti episcopi, Richardi, Vagoni, Bosoni, Adraldi"[146].

m [as her first husband,] FREDEBURGE, sister of GEOFFROY, daughter of --- ([960/65]-after 1012). "Barnuinus et uxor mea...Teutberge" donated property "in villa Vitrosco" to Saint-André de Bas, Vienne, for the souls of "senioris nostri domini Vigoni domneque Fredeburge", by charter dated "regnante domno Rodulfo rege" (dated to [1012/23] in the compilation, but presumably better dated to [993/96])[147]. "Fredeburgis matris eius..." subscribed the charter dated [Sep/Oct] 996 under which "Humbertus episcopus Gratianopolitanensis" donated property to Cluny[148]. "Wigo et uxor mea Fredeburga" donated property "in comitatu Viennensi in agro Cassiacensi in villa...Vernio" by charter dated Sep [996], subscribed by "Umberti episcopi, Richardi, Vagoni, Bosoni, Adraldi"[149]. "Rodolfus rex" jointly with "Agiltrude regina coniuge nostra nec non archiepiscopo Burchardo fratre nostro et comitibus Rodulpho et Uberto" gave the castle of Moras to "Umberto episcopo eiusque matri domine Freburgie et nepotibus eius, Wigonis bone memorie filiis, Umberto Wigoni Willelmo" by charter dated 6 Jun 1009[150]. "Fredeburgæ matris eius..." signed the charter dated 1012 under which "Umbertus Gratianopolensis ecclesiæ præsul" donated property to the abbey of Saint-Chaffre[151]. She was the sister of Geoffroy and sister-in-law of Théobald de Nyon[152]. According to Europäische Stammtafeln[153], Fredeburga married secondly "Arnoul de Theys", although the primary source which confirms his family name has not yet been identified. This supposed second marriage is far from certain. It is allegedly confirmed by an undated charter which records that "Arnulfus et uxor mea Frideburga necnon et filius noster Rodulphus" donated property "unum mansum in episcopatu Gratianopolitano in Valle Navis...les Aberges" to Cluny, witnessed by "Vuigonis comitis"[154]. The key to identifying the donor Fredeburge lies in the dating of this charter.

As noted elsewhere in the present document, the first member of the family of the comtes d'Albon who is recorded with the comital title was Guigues [III] "Vetus". It is not known when he was awarded the title, but he is not recorded with it in other sources before the mid-10th century. If the witness "Vuigonis comitis" was Guigues [III], which is likely, the donor Fredeburga would have been extremely old if she had been his paternal grandmother. Two other factors point to this supposed second marriage being incorrect. Firstly, it is extremely unlikely that Guigues [III]'s maternal grandmother could have given birth to a son by a second marriage, given the birth date estimated for her son by her [first] husband. Secondly, the charter dated 1012 makes no mention of Fredeburge's second husband, although it is likely that it predated the undated charter. A more likely explanation is that Fredeburge, who married Arnoul, was an otherwise unrecorded daughter of the older Fredeburge by her marriage to Guigues [I], and that the witness to the charter was her nephew. Chorier's Histoire de Dauphiné accepts that Arnoul was the husband of Guigues [I]'s widow, identifying him as Arnoul, son of Rudolf ("Arnoul, fils du comte Rodolphe"), adding that the latter patronised Fredeburge's children by her first marriage[155]. He cites no primary source on which he bases his statement.
